YEAR OF REPLACEMENT

By JAMES P. CUNNINGHAM
Equipment Editor, THE FILM DAILY

THE THEATER EQUIPMENT BUSINESS this year is in a replacement year. During 1953 and 1954, large numbers of exhibitors equipped their theaters to properly project the new techniques, requiring outlays of cash and commitments considerably beyond their normal budgeted expenditures for new apertures and lenses for new screens, sound, and other projection room equipment.

CUNNINGHAM

The year 1955 brought a leveling off in installations of new major equipment. Exhibitors took a breather to get their bearings and to absorb their purchases of the previous two years.

Now with most of the heavy concentration of new equipment for new processes rightfully placed in the theater, the exhibitor might well be expected to direct his attention toward the replacement of antiquated equipment, rather than to a new gadget for a new process, and toward remodeling and refurbishing. One manufacturer stated that no theater among the 99 per cent now equipped for wide-screen projection and magnetic sound reproduction need invest any money in projection and sound equipment unless some portion of his existing equipment needs replacement because of its age or condition.

The greatest need for the physical theater appears to be in refurbishing the theater itself. In addition to offering entertainment on the screen far superior to other, competitive forms, there can be no denying that the theater must present an inviting front and provide luxury and comfort for the patron. The keynote of physical theater operation this year has been aptly labeled, "Dress to Fill" for theater beautification and patron conveniences to increase attendance. There is a growing realization among theater owners that increased revenues and theater improvements are closely related factors.

REFURBISHING THE NEED

The need unquestionably exists for new theater seating, carpeting, draperies, lighting and other fixtures, remodeling and refurbishing, and aggressive exhibitors are expected to move forward. Those directions. There no longer exists the anxiety which caused some owners to hold back on equipment necessities because of some new potential process requiring further cash outlays.

In looking over the "state of the nation" in the theater equipment field, the observation has been heard: "Patrons do not go to theaters alone to walk on plush, attractive carpeting and to sit in ultra-comfortable chairs, but more and more exhibitors are becoming aware that the lack of such facilities may encourage patrons to seek their favorite motion pictures and comfort elsewhere. If theater owners would realize that good equipment is almost as essential as a good picture to their success, they will at least gradually improve their theaters."

One of the country's leading theater equipmentment manufacturers has made this pointed observation: "I feel that every theater, both indoor and drive-in, that is not able to properly present modern wide-screen projection and magnetic sound recordings, must purchase the screen sound equipment, lenses, arc lamps and arc lamp power supply needed for such presentation. The theater patron is now used to wide-screen presentation and the theater that does not offer it is headed for ultimate closing because of indifference."

SOUND PROGRESS

In the field of technical advancement in the presentation of motion pictures in the theater, magnetic sound installations can be expected to make important progress. It is generally believed that the theater not now equipped with magnetic sound reproduction equipment must ultimately be so equipped.

Manufacturers of single-track magnetic sound systems and their dealers in the field found a tremendous new interest created in the equipment by the 60-city 20th Century-Fox demonstration of the new "CinemaScope 55" during January and February. The 20th-Fox management stressed to exhibitors attending the demonstrations of sequences from "Carousel" and "The King and I," first to be produced on the new 'Scope 55mm. and printed down to 35mm., that only by the installation of magnetic sound can those theaters presently using optical sound expect to achieve the "ultimate in new processes" which was claimed for the new CinemaScope technique.

strations of "Scope 55," in mid-January, there were 16,449 theaters in the U. S. and Canada equipped to show CinemaScope pictures. Only 3,646 were equipped to show CinemaScope with stereophonic sound. Some 12,802 were equipped only with optical one track sound.

Besides gaining whatever additional quality of sound reproduction is achieved from a magnetic reproducer, the magnetic equipment was stressed as representing the solution to widespread exhibitor complaints of a continuing shortage of prints resulting from the necessity of distributors making available both optical and magnetic prints for each picture, thereby limiting the number of prints of each type. Anticipated adoption by some distributors of a new dual-type magnetic-and-optical (Magoptic) print had progressed no further early this year than its use by one company, M-G-M, for one picture, "Kismet."

PRINT-DOWNS PREVAIL

Loud rumblings heard early last year about a wide assortment of new techniques coming from Hollywood in various film widths caused understandable confusion at first in the minds of many in exhibition who feared they again faced the necessity of buying new sound and projection equipment for the 55., 65., or 70 mm., films which Hollywood press agents had heralded in anticipation long before their commercialization.

Out of all of this confusion has come the generally undisturbing pattern of a wider negative used in production printed down to standard 35 mm. for general exhibition, with only a comparative few road show engagements of some top attractions presented on wide prints. The printed down 35 mm. versions give the exhibitor a much finer product for his screen, for the greater enjoyment of his paying customers. They give greater content of subject, better definition, truer color rendition, greater depth and more light on the screen.

Hollywood approached the wide negative area in filming because it was convinced that the older methods of photography on 35 mm. are no longer adequate for the demands of wide screens now prevalent in exhibition. And they aproached wide film also with printed-down release prints in mind, determined that existing projection equipment shall not be made obsolete. Major Hollywood studios recognize the need of standardization of regular 35 mm. release prints of wide-negative productions—regardless of whether they are made on 70 mm., 65 mm., 55 mm., or whatever—and this will be the pattern for sometime to come. None of the larger filming processes will affect the general pattern of exhibition. The road showings of wide negative films on wide positives are not considered to be within the "general pattern."

As a matter of fact, the large film in projection is considered to be economically justified only in a few large theaters in some key operations under special presentation conditions.

TOP DEVELOPMENTS

The past year brought forth the following advancements along the line of new techniques:

Horizontal double-frame, right-to-left VistaVision was launched commercially with the opening of "Strategic Air Command" at the New York Paramount by April 20, 1955, followed by 10 regional premieres in as many key cities. Special projectors are required for the process—it is not compatible to existing 35 mm. standard equipment. In June, Paramount, sponsor of VistaVision, decided to center its marketing plans in the direction of vertical VistaVision, that is, the projection of 35 mm. prints reduced from the double-frame negative. Filming of Paramount product continues on the horizontal negative and then come the 35 mm. print-downs.

The TODD-AO 70 mm. process made its first commercial appearance in "Oklahoma!" at the New York Rivoli on Oct. 10, 1955, on the new dual-purpose (70 mm./35 mm.) projector developed by American Optical and built by Philips of the Netherlands. A special lenticular widely-curved screen and a corrective printing process permitting the projection of wide-film onto a curved screen from any high-angled booth in a theater without distortions are integral parts of the TODD-AO equipment package, but both required further development. Key city openings of "Oklahoma!" (25 are planned by July 1, 1956) continued without benefit of the new AO screen and the new printing technique, pending their perfection. Special booths were installed in theaters whose normal high-angled booths throw did not permit satisfactory projection of the wide-film production. "Oklahoma's!" six-track musical accompaniment won wide acclaim. Michael Todd's own "Around the World in 80 Days" will be the second in the TODD-AO technique. How soon either one of the first two will be released in 35 mm. was undetermined.

Twentieth-Fox completed development of its new CinemaScope 55 mm. process and placed in production, the first two "55" features: "Carousel" and "The King and I," as previously reported in this article. "Carousel" will be released in a printed-down 35 mm. version, but "The King and I" is expected to go out later this year as a road show on 55 mm., for which special projectors are being developed. 20th-Fox acclaims CinemaScope as the "universal system" of new screen processes, citing some 30,000-worldwide installations.

Reports of many Cinerama-type processes have been heard since that technique was launched on Sept. 20, 1952 with "This Is Cinerama" at the New York Stanley Theater, but the closest to the tangible came last Summer with the announcement by Elmer Rhoden of National Theaters that the circuit had acquired worldwide rights to the Smith-

Dietrich electronic lens system for controlling three projectors on a single tripod for a system now known as Cinemiracle. The projection system for the process embraces three projectors in a single booth—Cinerama uses three projectors in three booths. It will be the first system to use RCA's transistors instead of audio tubes in a sound reproducing system in production, described as a tremendous advantage for outdoor filming because of the compactness, mobility and economy of operation. Delivery of Cinemiracle cameras on Feb. 1 followed months of tests with a prototype. Unprecedented audience participation is claimed for the process; date for the theater commercialization of Cinemiracle was undetermined. Cost of the one booth theater installation is claimed to be far below that of Cinerama's three-booth setup.

M-G-M last year started experiments with 65 mm. negative areas and this year commercialization is expected in some unknown quantity. Columbia also is interested in 65 mm. Both companies are allied with Robert Gottschalk's Panavision in their wide-film future.

Republic Pictures entered the field of product for wide-screens with the application of Naturama, created from the Cinepanoramic anamorphic shooting lens process which originated in France and was developed by Republic's studio and by its related Consolidated Film Laboratories. The technique has a projection ratio of 2.35-to-1 and will be presented first in "The Maverick Queen" and "Come Next Spring."

Joseph and Irving Tushinsky reported progress with their Superscope variable type of anamorphic projection that was adopted by RKO Radio and first used by that studio in "Underwater," released in January, 1955. Superscope's expansion abroad was reportedly extensive during the year.

Meanwhile, Cinerama goes on its merry way rolling up enormous box-office records in 15 key city engagements and at other runs abroad.

(New methods of motion picture production and exhibition that came into use during and after 1952 are reported in detail in a feature prepared by the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, appearing elsewhere in this volume.)

This is not the place to discuss television as a competitor to the motion picture box-office, but a word in passing is in order to point up that the new production and projection techniques are the motion picture's sturdiest offensive tools against the competition of television or any other medium.

Robert E. Weitman, veteran motion picture theater showman and now an executive in big network television (ABC) stated recently that an exhibitor, analyzing the television-film theater competitive problem, must resolve to have "the finest equipment and top service in his theater to make his place comparably attractive to the modern living room. In other words," Weitman added, the exhibitor "has got to realize he isn't going to get people to spend money and sit around for an evening in an atmosphere that gives them a let-down from the home they have left."

DRIVE-INS THRIVE

Construction of an estimated 400 drive-in theaters last year will be equalled, and probably exceeded in 1956. Reports of projects definitely determined or on drawing boards indicate between 400 and 450 new outdoor theaters this year, based on information gathered from all over the country.

The estimate of a minimum of 400 new drive-ins in 1956 will bring the operating total to about 5,000 by the end of the year, giving exhibition, again for the second successive year, the greatest structural expansion in its history.

The great growth of the drive-in in 1955 led many to believe that saturation was close at hand in this comparatively new, vitally important segment of exhibition. However, reports regularly reaching the Equipment News Section of THE FILM DAILY indicate that while many areas now are dotted with drive-ins in sufficient numbers, there are still scores of other sections where new projects can be accommodated without competitive disadvantages. The trend in new projects is toward larger and ultra de luxe drive-ins.

The growth of the drive-in theater over the past 10 years in this country follows:

End of Year	Active Drive-In Theaters	End of Year	Active Drive-In Theaters
1946......	300	1951......	2,830
1947......	548	1952......	3,276
1948......	820	1953......	3,791
1949......	1,203	1954......	4,062
1950......	2,202	1955......	4,512

On the basis of an arbitrary estimate of a $50,000 investment per theater for major equipment costs, the total potential market for theater equipment manufacturers and dealers would run about $20,000,000 for the proposed 400 new drive-in jobs in 1956. The estimate, obviously, is a conservative one for a large number of the contemplated projects.

Drive-ins costing between $100,000 and $200,000 are not uncommon and scores represent an even higher investment. Furthermore, the trend generally is toward very elaborate de luxe outdoor operations. Also, the conservative estimate of $50,000 per theater for equipment alone would probably cover no more than projection booth, screen tower, speakers, ticket booths, ramps and other related items. Equipment for playgrounds, cafeterias and other elaborate layouts which are now a part of most new outdoor theaters, would cost many thousands over and above the aforementioned absolute essentials.

ing through the application of in-car heaters. Hundreds of theaters which heretofore counted a season of between 26 and 30 weeks, are extending their closing dates well beyond the usual Fall terminations, and are anticipating an earlier than usual opening after the hard core of Winter.

Drive-ins gross more from concession sales generally than all of the 15,000 indoor theaters combined. Their bulk soft drink sales are four times greater than the beverage sales of all conventional houses—citing only one concession item.

Full recognition of their purchasing power in the vending and concession product field was in great evidence at the November, 1955 TESMA-TEDA-IPA trade show in Chicago where a large number of the 206 display booths featured items for outdoor showmen, highlighting food dispensers of all kinds, vending machines for beverages and countless items for children's playgrounds.

During the convention periods given over to display booth inspection, representatives of manufacturers and theater supply dealers were admittedly impressed by the keen knowledge of the drive-in exhibition on the different types of equipment displayed, how it operates, and why.

Leaders in the equipment field have expressed the opinion that the drive-in theater this year will assert itself more than ever as a leader in exhibition.

The equipment replacement movement will find action, too, in the drive-in field. Existing drive-ins will get replacements and remodeling they sorely need. Exhibitors operating so-called "ozoners" cannot expect customers to return if they have to grope their way in the dark, damaging their cars; if the sound quality is bad and they miss most of the dialogue; if the projection is bad and the light is poor; if the picture size is inadequate; if the concession stand is unappetizing or poorly attended; and, above all, if they have to risk their life getting out and back on the highway.

There is every indication, too, that both drive-in operators will concentrate on theater beautification and other patron conveniences, on moonlight towers, ramp indicators, multicolored directional lights and signs to improve convenience and safety and facilitate traffic movement. Drive-in theaters, too, will make more use of attraction boards to increase advertising impact and to attract the "impulse" patron.

FEW NEW THEATERS

All of this drive-in activity and new construction compares with a mere handful of new building of conventional theaters.

A brand new and most unique switch in new theater expansion will come this year with the opening of the first combination drive-in and indoor operation at Babylon, Long Island, where Associated Prudential Playhouses of New York will erect a $1,000,000 outdoor theater to accommodate 1,370 cars and a stadium type enclosed theater with 1,000 seats. This new concept is aimed to solve many of the economic and weather problems of the drive-in. Single admission entitles the patron to attend either the drive-in or the indoor playhouse. Drive-in exhibitors have long complained that their investment does not have many hours of production, losing the daylight hours in the Summer and most of the Winter season. Following the trend in new drive-in construction, the Babylon project will boast of elaborate cafeteria facilities.

Indicating a continuance of limited construction of new conventional theaters, the turn of the year brought announcements of new indoor projects in only a few widely scattered areas. Remodeling of existing properties will continue to be the mainstay of structural improvements in exhibition, with theater supply dealers' pursuit of orders from conventional houses for normal equipment sales, replacements and refurbishing continuing apace.

REMODELING TREND

The trend in remodeling is toward a new, sleek, compactness with emphasis on smartness in theater lines and in interiors. Full advantage of pace gained has profitable potentials in the application of concession counters and service bars, etc. Remodeling, of course, includes full recognition of the industry-wide acceptance of the wide-screen, and reconstruction plans in many instances are drawn with physical provision in mind for the new screen media. Patrons' comfort and convenience is receiving more attention than ever before in remodeling of existing structures.

Interest is at a high pitch in what appears to be a new realization of the promotional dollar value of out-front signs at both outdoor and indoor theaters in attracting attention of prospective customers. There has been a noticeable increase in sign replacements to obtain the full benefits of attractive theater fronts, signs, electric displays and backgrounds to help sell tickets at the box office.

TOP NEEDS

The Equipment News Section of THE FILM DAILY contacted some top equipment manufacturers a few weeks ago to determine what items are most needed by theaters in this year of expected wide activity in replacements and refurbishings. Items mentioned by practically all of those interviewed include theater seats, carpeting, draperies and lighting fixtures.

Re-seating will give exhibitors an opportunity to study physical factors which need consideration for better vision for the new wide-screen.

In this age of expansive trade shows for products of American industry, the industry of manufacturing and marketing equipment for theaters of the world will, in September, 1956, stage the first International Trade Show, Fair and Exposition at the Coliseum exhibition in New York. The Theater Equipment and Supply Manufacturers Association will be the prime sponsors of the show, with the Theater Owners of America as co-sponsor and the Theater Equipment Dealers Association and the Popcorn and Concessions Association participating in what is virtually certain to be the biggest display of theater equipment and concession products ever assembled for the edification and investment of theater owners anywhere in the world.

TESMA's annual trade shows, with its TEDA and PCA partners, will assume international proportions for the first time by virtue of invitations extended to equipment manufacturers and dealers in all countries of the Free World to show their wares, and, by virtue, also, of invitations extended through the Motion Picture Export Association to all foreign trade associations to send delegations to the exhibit and equipment forums which will be among the many technological highlights scheduled for the business sessions. Merlin Lewis, executive secretary of TESMA, and director of the show, envisions a wide international participation with manufacturers of Europe and the Far East participating with American firms for the first time in large numbers in this country.

The Popcorn and Concessions Association (formerly the International Popcorn Association) will figure importantly in the trade show because of the tremendous progress made by manufacturers and dealers of concession equipment and products in motion picture exhibition, principally as a result of the growth of the drive-in theater and also the broad expansion of snack bars, service bars and refreshment vending equipment in the indoor theater.

The 16 mm. field became CinemaScoped in mid-1955 when Bausch & Lomb marketed 16 mm. CinemaScope projection lenses and at the same time 20th Century-Fox indicated that some of its important theatrical releases, already circulated in theaters, would be made available to the narrow-gauge field.

THE NEW TECHNIQUES

A comprehensive outline of present day camera and projection techniques prepared by the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers. Data includes details of camera and projector aperture, aspect ratio, direction and rate of film travel, number and type of sound tracks and loudspeakers, and type of screen suggested for use by sponsors of the techniques.

Sound Pictures

Sound movies, beginning in the late 1920's, were issued to theaters as a single series of picture images accompanied by a single photographic soundtrack on a strip of double-perforated film 35mm. wide. These are the specifications that at one time made them the world-wide standard:

CAMERA APERTURE—0.868 in. (22.05mm) x 0.631 in. (16.03mm).

PROJECTOR APERTURE—0.825 in. (20.95mm) x 0.600 in. (15.25mm).

ASPECT RATIO (PROPORTION OF PICTURE WIDTH TO HEIGHT)—1.37 to 1. (When this picture is projected down at an angle of 14 degrees, it presents an aspect ratio of about 1.33 to 1.)

DIRECTION OF FILM TRAVEL—Down.

RATE OF FILM TRAVEL—24 frames/sec, or 90 ft/min (27.4m/min).

SOUND TRACK—A single photographic track 0.100 in. (2.54mm) wide.

LOUDSPEAKER—A single speaker system placed behind and slightly higher than the center of the screen.

SCREEN—A sheet of plastic or plastic-coated fabric, perforated to allow the sound to pass through.

Film of 35mm width has been used for motion pictures since before 1890. The dimensions for perforations and film image areas developed slowly through the years until the advent of sound, when all dimensions became rather well fixed, and, except for a number of experimental efforts that did not achieve commercial success, remained almost unchanged until 1952.

Relatively few pictures produced since 1952 have been made for projection with the former standard 1.37 to 1 projector aperture. In many instances only the aspect ratio of the picture has been changed to yield a projected picture that is a noticeably longer horizontal rectangle. The descriptions which follow tell of a number of other and ingenious ways in which aspect ratios have been enlarged, in which image areas have been increased to permit the use of larger screens, and in which multiple sound channels have been employed to produce the illusion that the sound moves around with the picture.

Cinerama

Cinerama is a method of motion-picture production and exhibition developed by Fred Waller, following his work with an aerial gunnery trainer which simulated, with great realism, the view actually seen from a flying airplane by a gunner. The first public showing of the Cinerama system was in New York on the night of September 30, 1952. The picture, a special introductory type, was "This Is Cinemara."

All aspects of the system are special, except for the film which is of standard 35 mm. width with conventional sprocket holes. Instead of a single camera, three cameras are used side by side. They span a very wide area and the three images are precisely aligned on three 35mm. films.

In the theater, three projectors are used in separate projection rooms, producing a wide picture on a deeply curved screen. The geometry of the camera lens system, and projectors and screen, is chosen to give a picture of very nearly natural human vision to viewers seated near the center of the auditorium.

Sound comes from a separate magnetic film, 35mm. in width, that carries seven soundtracks. Five of them feed the loudspeakers behind the screen, the other two individually feed loudspeakers on left and right sides of the auditorium. Loudspeakers at the rear of the auditorium, are "cued" in or out as required by the action on the screen. Sound is controlled by the Cinerama theater engineer who starts the show and monitors picture brightness and focus.

Cinerama Specifications:

CAMERA APERTURE—Three, 1.116 in. (28.35mm) high x 0.997 in. (25.32mm) wide.

EFFECTIVE PROJECTOR APERTURE—Three, 1.088 in. (27.64mm) high x 0.985 in. (25.02mm) wide.

IMAGE HEIGHT—Equivalent to six perforations.

ASPECT RATIO OF PROJECTED PICTURE—Varies with viewing position. Is 2.06 to 1 as viewed from center projector.

DIRECTION OF FILM TRAVEL—Down.

RATE OF FILM TRAVEL—26 frames/sec, or 146.25 ft/min.

SOUND FILM—35 mm. full-coated magnetic, synchronized with, and traveling at the same rate as, the picture film.

LOUDSPEAKERS—Five speaker systems behind the screen, and eight distributed at the sides and rear of the auditorium.

SCREEN—The Cinerama screen is of unusual construction, consisting of a minimum of 1,200 vertical strips of perforated screen material that overlap slightly, presenting a continuous appearance to the audience. The screen is curved. The minimum size is 50 ft. wide across the cord, having its center back about 17½ ft.

CinemaScope

CinemaScope is a system of photography and projection adopted by 20th Cenury-Fox, and first used by them in the production of "The Robe" which had its premiere showing at the Roxy Theater in New York on the evening of September 16, 1953.

CinemaScope uses a special type of camera lens and projection lens whose designs are based on some early work of Dr. Henri Chretien, a French physicist. The camera lenses "see" a picture almost twice as wide as that "seen" by a conventional lens, but compress the image horizontally by 50 per cent so the film does not have to be twice normal width. When CinemaScope film is observed directly, all objects are seen tall and thin, for they are only half as wide as they appear in nature. The projection lenses then spread the picture out again, restoring objects to their familiar shape.

Film used with the original CinemaScope system was of standard 35mm. width, but the sprocket holes were made narrower to provide space across the film for four soundtracks. These tracks consist of stripes of magnetic material applied after the picture is printed. Three of them feed three loudspeakers behind the screen for the stereophonic effect, the fourth provides sound for a group of "surround" speakers placed in the theater auditorium, to the side of or behind the audience seating area.

CinemaScope theater release prints are, in addition, made with a single photographic soundtrack in the customary position. These prints have the earlier sprocket holes, but the picture is compressed by 50 per cent, as with the four-track prints.

Another type of film, 55.625mm. wide, is being developed by 20th Century-Fox as a taking film for use in the studio, and from which release prints in almost any size or aspect ratio could be produced. The anamorphic, or picture compression, lens system is to be used with this film, too; but the image area will be twice as high and twice as wide as the image on 35mm. CinemaScope, and therefore will have four times the area.

Screens used with CinemaScope have been principally those with highly directive surfaces that reflect most of the projected light into the audience seating area.

VistaVision

VistaVision is a descriptive name given by Paramount Pictures to a group of technical developments in the field of wide-screen motion-picture production and exhibition, for which the research engineers of that company are responsible. Principal innovation of the VistaVision program has been the introduction of a new type of camera and projector in which the film bears a double-frame image, and, instead of moving down as has been customary, moves horizontally from right to left, as seen by the operator from behind the camera or projector. "White Christmas," the first motion picture projected publicly by the horizontal double-frame VistaVision process, opened at Radio City Music Hall in New York on the night of October 14, 1954.

In addition to the horizontal double-frame theater release prints, Paramount produces single-frame standard release prints. Soundtrack on both is standard photographic, recorded with Perspecta Sound characteristics. Perspecta Sound is a system of recording and reproduction using a single photographic soundtrack and carrying three subaudible control tones which, with the appropriate reproducing equipment, will shift the sound source to left, center or right speakers. When the special reproducing equipment is not used, the Perspecta Sound track reproduces as a normal single track. On the double-frame film, the track, if projected onto the screen, would appear at the top. In conventional prints, it would appear at the left side of the picture.

VistaVision Specifications

LOUDSPEAKERS—Theaters equipped for Perspecta Sound use three speakers placed behind the screen at left, center and right. Others, not so equipped, use the usual single loudspeaker centered behind the screen.

SCREEN—Conventional screens of appropriate size are recommended.

Superscope

SuperScope is the name applied to a variable type of anamorphic projection system designed by Joseph and Irving Tushinsky. It was adopted by RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., who first used it in the production of "Underwater," released in January 1955. The first SuperScope picture to be shown publicly was "Vera Cruz," released by United Artists first shown at the Capitol Theater in New York on December 25, 1954.

SuperScope is photographed in the normal way; however, the film area is exposed approximately sprocket hole to sprocket hole instead of confining the image to the usual frame area. Then, in production of color prints, horizontal compression is introduced into the matrix by Technicolor, without adding any steps to the process; and the final release prints are manufactured through Technicolor's standard dye transfer method.

In other methods of printing, compression would be introduced optically into a dupe negative and then printing would be done in the normal manner.

The image is expanded again during projection by an anamorphic lens of the fixed or variable type.

SuperScope is available for both color and black-and-white productions.

SuperScope uses film of 35mm. width, with standard sprocket holes and a single photographic soundtrack in the customary location. To accommodate this optical soundtrack, the centerline of the picture frame has been shifted slightly. This necessitates the use of a new aperture plate having an opening 0.715 x 0.715 in. SuperScope anamorphic prints may be projected with CinemaScope lenses because the compression ratio used is two to one, as with CinemaScope.

Todd-AO

This wide-angle photographic process was developed by Dr. Brian O'Brien of the American Optical Company, and is one of the newest of the wide-screen motion-picture processes. Todd-AO was first used by Rodgers and Hammerstein Pictures, Inc., in the production of "Oklahoma!" which was shown publicly for the first time at the Rivoli Theater in New York on October 12, 1955.

The objective of audience participation is on the order of that created by Cinerama. However, Todd-AO uses a single camera and one projector. Four special camera lenses were developed for this process. These lenses are classified according to angle of coverage, rather than focal length, and cover horizontal angles of 37°, 48°, 64°, and 128°. The latter wide-angle model is called the "bugeye."

Camera film is 65mm. wide. The composite projection prints, including soundtracks, are 70mm. wide, and carry special perforations, five sprocket holes per frame. Six magnetic soundtracks are used on the 70mm. film, two outside the sprocket holes on either side, and one just inside the sprocket holes on either side.

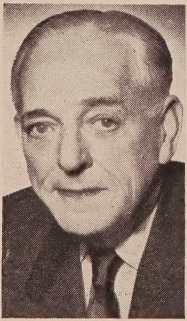
PROMOTION POTENTIAL OF NEW SOUND GOES BEGGING

By BERT ENNIS

Director Public Relations, Altec Service Corp.

WE SINCERELY TRUST this may meet the eye of exhibitors who are earnestly and sincerely seeking ways and means to stimulate a box office which now sometimes fails to feel the looked-for effect of publicity and exploitation.

Without detracting in the least from the tried and true methods used to attract ticket buyers, an unusual and almost new avenue of promotion stares thousands of exhibitors in the face, more than often without recognition. Much has been said and written during the year just past of the indifference of newspapers throughout the land to motion picture publicity. Numerous trade paper editors, including the erudite Chester B. Bahn, of THE FILM DAILY, have properly and justly pointed out that the television networks and their shows have stolen the spotlight on many occasions in the amount of space newspapers have accorded their activities.



ENNIS

As a partial palliative for this situation, I submit that there is a new and fresh approach at the command of thousands of exhibitors large and small. It is fully granted from a long and rich experience in the field of motion picture publicity that films, stars, directors and studios are worthwhile and essential pegs on which should be draped material designed for newspaper publication and readership. But what about the new sound techniques that to a degree still continue to intrigue, amaze and entertain the movie-goer. The ticket-buyer, the newspaper reader, knows less than nothing how stereophonic sound is achieved, or for that matter, how optical sound makes possible his or her auditory pleasure.

BAUSCH & LOMB

I am certain there is a feature newspaper story, rich and unusual in pictorial value, in the booth and auditorium of many theaters from New York to California. Exhibitors should alert their local newspaper editor to the feature possibilities of a story revealing the manner in which stereosound is brought to their audiences. A reporter's tour of the projection booth and auditorium could explain, in lay language, the functions of the sound head, the amplifiers, surround speakers and backstage speakers, stressing the manner in which the effect of directional "audience participation" sound is achieved. Sound equipment could be afforded the same treatment in programs, lobby displays, and press books. The average patron has no conception of how sound reaches him in a theater. This is a day and age of "inside" stories, and here's one that needs doing.

In those instances where CinemaScope, Todd-AO, VistaVision are involved, these stories could deal with both picture and sound revelations. The writer is at the service of those Altec clients who require basic material in the way of photographs and descriptive material to take advantage of a publicity opportunity that is presently going begging.

LEGISLATIVE RESTRICTIONS IN FOREIGN FILM MARKETS

By NATHAN D. GOLDEN
Director, Scientific, Motion Picture & Photographic Products Division
Business and Defense Services Administration
U. S. Department of Commerce

THE UNITED STATES motion picture industry in 1955 could point with pride to the expansion of its foreign business and the manner in which it had met the multiple problems directly affecting the foreign distribution of American films. Its films were never more popular with foreign audiences and dollar remittances from abroad were at record levels.

GOLDEN

Operation of United States film companies in the international market became more complex during 1955, with the industry encountering serious import restriction problems in a number of the major countries. At the end of 1955 some of these problems had not yet been satisfactory resolved. In past years the primary problems were related to obtaining foreign exchange with which to make dollar remittances of film earnings of United States films. However, the principal difficulties confronting the American film industry at the present time in its foreign operations seems to be in getting their films into the foreign countries for showing in the theaters. This type of legislative action usually takes the form of import or playing time quotas, rental ceilings, excessive taxation, usually strict censorship, or import licensing restrictions.

All indications point to the fact that remittances of film earnings from our foreign markets in 1955 will again be more than $200,000,000. Film agreements with the United Kingdom and France were renewed for another year during 1955 and a new three-year agreement was concluded in December 1955, with Italy. Remittances from such major markets as Canada, Germany, Brazil, and Australia were relatively unhampered. Foreign business for United States films in 1956 should continue at a high level.

It is generally accepted that more than 40 per cent of the total income of the United States industry is accounted for by foreign revenues. In a survey made by this Division in early 1955 it was reported that approximately 68 per cent of the screen time of theaters throughout the free world were devoted to the exhibition of United States films.

One important factor in the growth of foreign business for United States films in recent years has been the increase in theater facilities. There were 108,537 motion picture theaters in operation throughout the world on January 1, 1955, about 9,000 more than were in operation in 1951. Excellent progress has been made in the installation of new projection and sound technique in foreign theaters and the reception by the foreign audiences of our new type of films has been very good. But it is the film itself that attracts the audiences and undoubtedly the most important factor in our favorable foreign business has been the increasing number of high quality productions which have been exported.

The Department of Commerce was established long ago for the purpose of working with business and industry in government affairs, both domestic and foreign. Two-way foreign trade has always played an important part in the American economy. It should be no different in our trade in motion picture films. The cutting off of export markets for our American films would have a very drastic effect on the economic well-being of the motion picture industry, with a similar effect upon the economic life of any foreign country, unless more of their films are sold in the United States. Understanding between the people of Nations offers the best promise for a solid and lasting peace. What better medium is there than through the exchange of our films to effect such an understanding. It is therefore, desirable for political and economic reasons that we expand our two-way foreign trade in films.

There follows a country-by-country resume of the various legislative restrictions affecting the distribution and exhibition of United States films throughout the world:

EUROPE

ALBANIA—All motion picture theaters in Albania have been nationalized and the importation, distribution, and exhibition of films is entirely in the hands of the Albanian government which has shown no desire to import any films except those of Soviet production.

AUSTRIA—No quota or contingent measures are in effect in Austria which might reduce or prevent the distribution of United States motion pictures. Import licenses are required. Transfer of dollar exchange for film remittances is prohibited except in occasional individual cases when limited transfers of foreign exchange may be obtained through the Austrian National Bank. In May 1955 it was reported that a proposal was incorporated in the new tariff bill to increase the customs duty for all imported films that were dubbed into the German language prior to importation into Austria. This measure would have forced United States distributors to dub their films in Austria. Pictures for Austrian release are generally dubbed in West Germany. This problem was satisfactorily resolved and although the import duty for films into Austria was increased somewhat there are no requirements that dubbing be done in Austria.

BELGIUM—In 1953, the United States film industry reached an agreement with the Belgian Government covering imports and remittances of dollar earnings during the two-year period beginning March 1, 1953. In March 1955 this agreement was renewed for another two-year period to February 28, 1957. This agreement is reported to provide for the entry of about 250 United States feature films annually, which is approximately the same number as imported in 1952. It also provides for the remittance in dollars of 65 per cent of current film earnings, with the other 35 per cent virtually exhausted by the companies' operating expenses in Belgium. It was reported that U. S. film companies would utilize the facilities of Belgian laboratories for a percentage of the black and white prints to be released in the country. Import licenses are required but in the framework of this agreement are granted without undue delay. It would appear that barring some unforeseen circumstances, the problem of importing U. S. films into Belgium and remitting film earnings has been satisfactorily resolved.

The Belgian Government provides for the payment of a subsidy to producers of Belgian newsreels, short subjects, and feature length films. The subsidy to be paid to producers of full-length feature films is established at an amount equal to 70 per cent of the exhibition tax collected on the movie programs of which the domestic film forms a part. For documentary and short films this percentage is 25 per cent.

BULGARIA—All theaters in Bulgaria are nationalized and the importation and distribution of motion pictures is controlled by the state monopoly.

CZECHOSLOVAKIA—The Government of Czechoslovakia has established a State monopoly that controls the production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures. No imports may be made without a license; an allocation of foreign exchange automatically follows issuance of the import license. While there are no regulations restricting the distribution of foreign films, measures controlling the distribution of films are implied in the institution of the monopoly. No new United States films are known to have been released in Czechoslovakia in recent years.

DENMARK—In early 1954, the last remaining restrictions upon the importation of foreign films into Denmark and the transfer of remittances abroad were removed. At present the importation of foreign films takes place freely and remittances for rentals are permitted to all areas, including the dollar area. Rentals are negotiated between distributors and exhibitors and are currently at 30 per cent of box-office receipts, after deduction of entertainment tax on tickets. According to reports, film rentals in Denmark are now the lowest in Western Europe. In May 1955, the major U. S. film companies, who had been negotiating unsuccessfully for more than a year in an effort to obtain higher rentals, decided that they could no longer provide films at the 30 per cent figure. Since that date, the U. S film industry has withheld its films from the Danish market. At the end of 1955, the U. S. film companies were still not shipping films to Denmark and it appeared that the dispute could persist for several months.

Producers of Danish full-length entertainment films receive Government aid in the form of a license to operate a motion picture theater, which is exempted from the cinema tax on theater profits. Producers of Danish feature films also receive a rebate of 2/11 of the entertainment tax on theater tickets sold for Danish films. Ceiling prices on theater admissions were abolished in 1952.

FINLAND—There are no quotas limiting the number of films which may be imported into Finland, however, restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange may tend to reduce the distribution of imported films. Import licenses are required but carry no title to foreign exchange, for which a separate application is required.

FRANCE—After several months of negotiations, a new Franco-American film agreement was announced in October 1955, to replace the agreement which expired June 30, 1955. The new agreement is for a two-year period, July 1955 to June 1957, and follows closely the provisions contained in the previous agreement. Authorized monthly remittances of United States film earnings at the official rate of exchange, however, was increased to $235,000 from $200,000. U. S. film earnings in excess of this amount are blocked and may be employed for various specified purposes. In addition, $50,000 per film per year may be transferred from earnings in France of a U. S. film entered in the annual Cannes Film Festival This is a new provision in the agreement. The agreement provides for a total of 110 import permits for United States films per year. The new agreement is reported to be free from any subsidy provisions.

Playing time regulations require French films to be exhibited five weeks out of each thirteen. In September 1948 the French Government created a temporary fund for the development of the French Film Industry. Revenue for this fund was supplied by taxes on theater admissions and on a meterage tax based on the length of the film. The bulk of the revenue for this subsidy is derived from taxes levied on United States films. In August 1953, these taxes were increased when a new film assistance law was enacted making the film fund a more or less permanent subsidy for the French industry. As of May 1, 1954, the meterage tax was fixed at 450 francs per meter for feature films in the French language and 50 francs per meter for foreign feature films shown in the original version. In May 1955, the French Government issued a decree increasing the taxes on admission tickets, which provided the fund with about 90 per cent of its receipts in 1954. The tax on tickets priced up to 130 francs remained unchanged but it increased sharply on tickets over 130 francs. It is estimated that the additional revenue from these increased taxes will be 1,500,000,000 francs yearly and bring the fund's total annual receipts up to 5,500,000,000.

GERMANY—No import quota regulations are in effect which would reduce or prevent distribution of United States films in Western Germany. The agreement between representatives of the United States film industry and the West German Government which limited United States feature film imports into Western Germany to 240 during the 1953-54 distribution year was not renewed for the 1954-55 year. The United States film industry agreed to import only that type of film which has a logical market in Western Germany and the new agreement contains no quantitative restrictions with regard to number of U. S. films which may be imported. Import licenses are required. Despite the absence of any laws requiring a percentage of German films to be exhibited, screen time for German films has been increasing. German new releases occupied approximately 45 per cent of total screen time during the 1953-54 distribution year, United States films about 35 per cent, with other foreign films and German re-issues accounting for the other 20 per cent.

In September 1954, the German Government virtually abolished the system of blocked accounts. At that time all blocked accounts were to be transferable to any country with which Germany had a payment agreement or might be credited to so-called liberalized capital accounts. Balances in the liberalized capital accounts could be used for any purpose within Germany. While direct transfer of such accounts to dollars is not yet possible, transfers can be made indirectly through any European Payments Union currency at a small discount. United States film companies have no difficulty in transferring their film earnings from Germany under this arrangement.

While there have been reports throughout 1955 that steps would be taken to assist German film producers through a subsidy plan similar to the British Eady Plan or through a release tax, at the end of the year, no such plans had been put into operation. Throughout 1955 negotiations were being carried on with the West German Government in an effort to keep this important market for United States films free from any quantitative restrictions on imports or screen time.

GIBRALTAR—All booking of films into Gibraltar is done through London. Applications for dollars are made to the Financial Secretary of the Colony, and dollars can be had for the purchase of United States films only if the British Financial Secretary in England approves. A Gibraltar Ordinance provides that all U. S. dollars acquired must be surrendered to the Government. It is unlikely that permit to import films and export currency from Gibraltar would be granted.

GREECE—Imports of United States films into Greece are now exempt from all quantitative and foreign exchange allocation limitations and are governed by the general free import licensing regulations currently applicable to all Greek imports. On March 17, 1954, the Greek Government issued a revised set of import regulations which authorized importation, both on a percentage and on a flat royalty basis from all sources. There are two general limitations, the amount of flat royalties could not exceed $4,000 per feature film and remittance of flat royalties could not be effected until the picture involved had been released for exhibition in a first-run theater in Greece, but could be remitted within 60 days of such exhibition. Inasmuch as nearly all United States films are imported on a percentage royalty basis, this has little effect on the distribution of United States films.

In the case of films imported for distribution on a percentage royalty basis, the foreign producer's share may not exceed 60 per cent of gross receipts. The foreign producer's share of royalty earnings must be deposited by the distributor with the Bank of Greece in a blocked account in the name of the foreign producer within 60 days from the last day of the month during which the picture involved was released for exhibition. Remittances in foreign exchange are made periodically by the Bank of Greece after the records of the distributor have been audited to check the accuracy of the amounts deposited with the Bank.

On April 2, 1954, a general regulation was issued requiring Greek importers to obtain an import approval certificate from Greek authorities prior to contracting with a foreign supplier and before effecting shipment of films. United States companies were warned against making shipment before the necessary import approval had been granted. During the past year U. S. film companies have been in almost constant negotiations with the Greek Government. An extremely difficult situation has arisen there due to a combination of high admission taxes, film rental ceilings, and increased operating costs, which have greatly reduced U. S. film earnings in that market. At the end of 1955, however, no relief had been obtained from the Greek Government.

HUNGARY—Production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures in Hungary have been nationalized and are completely under Government control. No new United States films are known to have been released in Hungary in recent years. MPEA reported that in March 1950 the Hungarian Government issued an order requiring it to surrender all motion picture prints of member companies on hand in Hungary to the Ministry of Education.

ICELAND—Imports of motion pictures into Iceland have been curtailed since the beginning of 1948 because of shortage of foreign currencies, especially dollars. Import and currency licenses are required. The currency permit does not guarantee foreign exchange which is dependent upon exchange available and a priority determined by a foreign exchange committee.

IRELAND—The importation of motion pictures into Ireland continues to be handled from the United Kingdom. All United States films that are exhibited are obtained from the British subsidiaries of United States film companies and payment is made in sterling. No quotas or other import regulations are in effect in Ireland that restrict importation and exhibition of United States films.

ITALY—Under the terms of the Italian film agreements, covering the two-year period from September 1, 1954 to August 31, 1956, United States film companies were permitted to remit a reported $3,000,000 annually at the official rate of exchange, plus the transfer of the equivalent of their payments for dubbing fees and 5 per cent of any balance remaining in their blocked accounts at the end of each calendar year. It was expected that U. S. film companies would be able to remit about $4,200,000 annually under this agreement. Utilization of blocked U. S. film earnings in Italy was to be further liberalized to permit compensation deals and it is believed that U. S. film companies have very little blocked funds in Italy.

As the result of negotiations carried on toward the end of 1955 with regard to a proposed revision of the Italian film law, a new three-year film agreement was concluded with the Italians. The new agreement maintains the present import level of U. S. films and continues the remittance arrangements included in the previous agreement. However, the dubbing license fee for United States films is to be increased to 5,500,000 lire from the present fee of 2,500,000 lire. Playing time requirements for Italian films, which in the old law was set at 80 days a year, will probably be increased to 100 days a year. The permitted uses of blocked film earnings remains unchanged in the new agreement.

The Italian film law provides for a contribution to Italian feature film producers based on a percentage of gross receipts, and provides a tax rebate to exhibitors showing Italian films. Italian exhibitors must show either an Italian produced newsreels or short subject at each theater program.

LUXEMBOURG—There are no trade restrictions which might prevent, retard, or hinder United States films being shown in Luxembourg and no such measures are contemplated. Import permits are not required. Films rented by the Luxembourg theaters are paid for through Belgium and adequate foreign exchange has been available for this purpose.

MALTA—All United States and British films entering Malta are brought into the country through London and are distributed by the Malta United Film Corporation, a subsidiary of the Kinematograph Renters Society in London.

NETHERLANDS—The Netherlands Motion Picture Association in its annual report states that the Netherlands Bank late in 1953 decided to rescind the transfer and licensing permit granted to the Association after the liberation of the Netherlands. The Netherlands Bank retains its controlling responsibility for and authority over foreign exchange expended for the importation of motion pictures. In place of the old arrangement, whereby import licenses were obtained from the Association, the Bank has granted film distributors permission to negotiate licensing contracts and to settle payment obligations with foreigners without previous approval by the Bank. This permission has been granted because the general foreign exchange position of the Netherlands has become much more favorable and foreign exchange transactions are gradually becoming easier. At the end of 1954 no difficulties were being encounted in the allocation of foreign exchange for United States films.

Regulations governing playing time of films provide that exhibitors should show for at least 12 weeks each year feature films that had not been made in the United States and for which no dollars were to be paid, or from which no dollar debt would arise. Negotiations were carried on during 1954 between the United States film industry and the Netherlands Motion Picture Association in an attempt to remove the ceiling placed on film rentals in the Netherlands. At the end of 1954, however, while wide-screen and three-dimensional pictures were subject to free negotiations between distributors and exhibitors, the rental of all other feature films must be within a sliding scale from 22½ percent to 40 percent.

NORWAY—There are no pertinent quota or contingent measures in effect in Norway for the importation of United States films. Import permits are required. Arrangements for the transfer of film earnings has remained the same during the past few years. It is believed that there is an annual allocation of foreign exchange for film earnings. Of this allocation, 35 per cent may be transferred in dollars, 35 per cent is blocked for transfer in equal parts during each of the four following years, and 30 per cent was to be made available to Norweigian distributors for operating expenses in Norway. In October 1954, an agreement was reached regarding the question of film rentals which had been a matter of great concern to U. S. companies for some time. This agreement provided that the film rental for regular features shall be 40 per cent, except for a maximum of two films annually which may be selected by each major U. S. film company and which shall be freely negotiable between the particular company and the exhibitors. However, if no agreement can be reached as to the amount of the rentals for these two films and the U. S. company refuses to release them at 40 per cent, the exhibitors association may then refuse to exhibit any films released by that U. S. company not already covered by existing contracts. It is this last provision which has caused considerable difficulty during the past year as it virtually gives the Norwegians boycott power over films of U. S. companies who refuse to release their outstanding films at the 40 per cent rental ceiling.

POLAND—Government owned "Film Polski" has a monopoly of production, distribution, and exhibition of motion pictures for the entire country of Poland. All transfers of foreign exchange are subject to the approval of the Polish Government. Due to the serious shortage of foreign exchange in this country, the obtaining of such permits is extremely difficult. To date no foreign exchange has been secured for U. S. films. Import permits are required.

PORTUGAL—Remittance of United States film royalties has been free of complications during recent years, however, they are subject to prior sanction by the Bank of Portugal. Theaters must exhibit Portuguese films one week to every five weeks of foreign films, except when national productions are not available. Licenses are required for all imports, however, distributors have encountered no difficulty in obtaining licenses for films. During recent years the Portuguese Government has allocated a total of $600,000 annually for motion picture films.

RUMANIA—On November 2, 1948, a decree was approved nationalizing all motion picture enterprises in Rumania, which covered all studios, laboratories, import, export, rental and marketing concerns with all their properties, equipment, furnishing and inventories. Foreign exchange may be transferred only upon approval by the National Bank of Rumania and as far as is known no transfers for U. S. films have been made during the past year.

SPAIN—After rather lengthy negotiations, it was announced in July 1955 that an agreement had been reached to extend for another year the Spanish film agreement which expired at the end of May 1955. This agreement provided for a total of 100 United States feature films to be imported, 60 to be distributed by the United States film distributors in Spain and 40 to be distributed by Spanish distributors. It also stated that the Spanish film Service each quarter would request approval for the remittance of 40 per cent of the accumulated peseta balances of the United States companies, however, if dollars were not available the Spanish Government would grant approval for the transfer of the pesetas. However, shortly after the extension of the agreement was announced, the Spanish Government issued an order, effective October 1, 1955, requiring all motion picture distribution companies operating in Spain to distribute, in the theaters they serviced, one Spanish-made film for every four foreign-made films dubbed into the Spanish language. U. S. film companies objected to this order and stated that acceptance would constitute a precedent that would gravely affect their worldwide film market. As the result of this order the United States film industry withdrew its acceptance of the extended importation agreement and decided to suspend film shipments to Spain pending settlement of the distributor's quota provisions. While this situation was not resolved at the end of 1955, the Spanish Government had invited the U. S. industry to renew negotiations and there was hope that a satisfactory arrangement would be worked out whereby shipments of U. S. films to Spain would be resumed.

Spanish theaters must show films one week out of six unless the film industry cannot provide the exhibitor with a Spanish production in which case he may continue to show foreign films. This is often the case. A newsreel must be shown on each theater program and the only newsreel permitted in Spain is the nationally produced "NO-DO."

SWEDEN—While the importation of motion picture films was liberalized in October 1954 and import licenses are no longer required by the Swedish authorities, the transfer of film earnings is still subject to rigid control. All transfer of foreign exchange requires authorization of the Swedish foreign exchange authorities. The transfer of film rentals and royalties is subject to a special agreement between the Swedish Riksbank and the United States film companies. In renewing the annual agreement in 1952, it was reported that the Swedish Government somewhat liberalized its restrictions on the transfer of current film royalties. Blocked film earnings may be liquidated by way of special compensation transactions. At the present time it is possible to obtain rawstock film, negatives, and prints as needed to maintain normal distribution in Sweden of United States films and no problems have been encountered with regard to foreign exchange.

SWITZERLAND—Imports of films are controlled by the quasi-official Swiss Film Chamber in Bern, which issues import permits to holders of quotas. Quotas for the importation of films into Switzerland are based on the Federal Decree of July 7, 1939, which granted distributors the right to import feature films to the same extent as imported during the 4-year period January 1935 through December 1938. The usual quota assigned to an importer is equal to at least 50 per cent and at most 70 per cent of the average number of 35 mm. features he imported during this four-year period. During 1949 and 1950, the import quota was fixed at 70 per cent of the base period, however, for 1951 and 1952 it was reduced to 60 per cent. Provision is made for special cases, both for extra quotas for established importers and for assignment of quotas to importers who did not exist in the market in 1938. Contingents are based on titles and are allotted to individual importers and not to countries. There are no restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange.

TURKEY—No quota or contingent measures which might reduce or prevent the distribution of U. S. motion pictures are in effect in Turkey. An import and foreign exchange permit must be obtained from the Turkish authorities. Early in 1954 the Turkish Bank in order to control dollar exchange, which was in extremely short supply, issued an order that Turkish distributors of United States films would have to deposit their payments in the Bank and the Bank would make payment to the U. S. film companies. Since that time United States film companies have had extreme difficulty in receiving payment for their films and their credits are accumulating into a sizeable sum. United States film companies have no distribution set-up in Turkey and sell their films to independent Turkish distributors.

Motion picture imports are subject to a transaction tax, which is assessed on most types of processed and semi-processed goods imported into Turkey at a rate of 18 per cent of landed cost (including customs duties and various miscellaneous taxes). The Turkish fiscal authorities have also ruled that not only was the motion picture films (imported copies) subject to this tax but that the royalties or their equivalent were to be included in calclulating the basis of the tax. There is also a substantial admission tax differential in favor of Turkish films which gives a strong impetus to the domestic industry. All efforts to have the transaction tax reduced or have the admission tax differential removed have failed.

U.S.S.R.—The Soviet film industry is a government monopoly under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of the Motion Picture Industry, and both domestic production and importation of foreign films are subject to the regulations of this ministry. While there have been reports during 1955 that the Russians are interested in importing U. S. films, nothing definite developed along this line. No new U. S. films have been released in Russia for several years.

UNITED KINGDOM—The new Anglo-American film agreement to cover the year beginning October 1, 1955, extended for another year the provisions of the previous agreement. The transfer of $17,000,000 is again provided for and there are provisions permitting convertibility of certain amounts of United States production investments in Britain. The United States film companies may again remit a portion of their share of the Eady Tax Plan money, not to exceed $2,250,000. Annual remittances under this agreement are estimated at from $20,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Government trade restrictions on the showing of foreign films have been in effect in the United Kingdom since 1927. At present 30 per cent of the first feature films exhibited in British theaters and 25 per cent of the supporting films (second features and shorts) must be British productions. The so-called Eady Plan to assist the British film industry was put into operation in September 1950 and in November 1953 was extended for another three years to the end of July 1957. This plan calls for an increase in the entertainment tax to establish a subsidy to be used by British film producers, distributors, and exhibitors.

Separate import licenses have been required for all motion picture films except newsreels since May 1948.

The National Film Finance Corporation was established in March 1949 with an initial grant of 5,000,000 pounds sterling as an operating fund from which loans could be made during a five-year period to assist British producers. In 1950 an additional 1,000,000 pounds sterling was made available to the Corporation and in 1954 the life of the Corporation was extended for an additional three-year period.

YUGOSLAVIA—The motion picture industry in Yugoslavia is nationalized and all phases of the industry are controlled by the Government. In 1948 an agreement was signed with the Yugoslav Government providing for the purchase of United States films with payment to be made in dollars. This agreement was significant in that United States films again entered this market and also it represented a reversal in the film policy of the Yugoslav Government which prior to this date had encouraged the showing of Soviet films. At the present time about half of the pictures shown in Yugoslav are United States productions.

In March 1952 the Information Media Guaranty Program of the United States Government allocated dollars to enable Yugoslavia to purchase or lease United States films. United States distributtors after signing contracts with the U. S. Government would accept payment in the currency of Yugoslavia with the U. S. Government guaranteeing conversion to dollars where necessary. Early in 1955, Yugoslav Film, the sole Yugoslav agency for importing foreign films, concluded a contract with the Motion Picture Export Association for approximately 75 United States films for distribution during 1955-56. Yugoslav Film signed its first contract with MPEA in 1949 and has signed successive contracts annually since that date. This new contract represents a marked increase in MPEA films in Yugoslavia as earlier contracts provided for from 25 to 35 films. In addition Yugoslav Film had concluded contracts with independent U. S. film companies not members of the MPEA, consequently, substantially more U. S. films are expected to be imported into Yugoslavia during 1955-56 than during the previous year when a total of 75 U. S. films were shown in Yugoslavia.

CANADA

The permit requirements for foreign exchange remittances were removed at the end of 1951. Since that date, Canadian film distributors are permitted to remit, at the going, or current rate of exchange, to the United States producers the net profits on rentals and royalties, less a withholding tax of 10 per cent. United States motion pictures enter Canada and are distributed throughout all the provinces without quota or exhibition restrictions.

SOUTH AMERICA

ARGENTINA—For several years United States distributors in Argentina faced three serious problems. (1) Limitations on imports of new pictures. (2) Periodic restrictions on the issuance of exhibition permits. (3) Inability to remit blocked film earnings. The situation changed in December 1953, when the Government relaxed restrictions on imports and on the issuance of exhibition permits. Since that date U. S. film distributors have had no trouble with regard to imports and have received exhibition permits when requested. Very satisfactory progress was also made with regard to remittance of blocked earnings. By the end of 1953 it was reported that U. S. film companies were permitted to remit $500,000 of their accumulated earnings and early in 1954 another $500,000 was reportedly approved. Also blocked film earnings were being made available for transfer through compensation deals.

Compared with recent years 1954 and 1955 were particularly good for the distributors of U. S films in Argentina. More U. S. films are being released. The Argentine film agreement which was signed in 1950 expired in May 1955 and it was announced that the Argentine Government would consider it operative until the end of 1955 pending negotiation of a new agreement. However, just what the attitude of the new Argentine Government will be with regard to the new agreement is not known.

The Argentine Government issued a decree dated September 28, 1949, establishing a percentage of a film's earnings to be paid as a minimum rental to producer and distributor. At the present time, first-run theaters must pay a minimum of 60 per cent of gross earnings (less taxes) to the producer and distributor of Argentine films. Second-run theaters must pay a 45 per cent minimum rental and all other theaters 40 per cent for the first week and 30 per cent thereafter. There are no similar regulations applicable to distributors of imported films.

The Argentine Government also seeks to protect the local producer by restricting the exhibitions of his foreign competitor. Under existing regulations, all first-run theaters must show Argentine pictures one week out of every month while all others must exhibit Argentine films three weeks out of every six. In addition, each Argentine film must remain in first-run theaters for a minimum of one week. If box-office receipts surpass 60 per cent of the figure established by that theater to justify the holding over a foreign film, the Argentine film will continue for another week. This reduces the playing time available for foreign films.

BOLIVIA—Import permits are required for motion pictures into Bolivia. The 1954 foreign exchange budget allocated $110,000 for the importation of motion picture films, however, no information on the 1955 foreign exchange allocation was released.

On May 27, 1954, a Bolivian decree gave authority to the Subsecretary of Press, Information and Culture to control the exhibition of all films. Each distributor would be required to submit a list of films which he desired to import, giving the title, producer, names of stars, dates of release in the country of origin, whether black and white or color, and the reviews given the film by United States or Argentine trade papers. The Subsecretary was to select its programs from the above list and allocate foreign exchange for its importation. However, negotiations between the U. S. film companies and the Bolivian Government resulted in an agreement whereby U. S. film producers would be allowed to supply programs without the condition of prior selection and tentatively fixed the amount to be paid for each film at $300 for which official exchange would be supplied.

BRAZIL—United States film companies have encountered little difficulty in the distribution of their products in the Brazilian market. Import license problems have been reduced and although some problems arose with regard to film remittances these appear to have been satisfactorily resolved. The U. S. film industry is making a strong effort to secure higher admission prices in Brazil to partly compensate for the increased operating costs and for the increase in agios (premiums paid for foreign exchange). Admission prices in Brazil are reported to be among the lowest in the world.

Playing time regulations require that Brazilian films must be shown in the ratio of one Brazilian film program to every 8 foreign film programs. The Brazilian press reported in October 1952, that the Bank of Brazil had issued new regulations which would require importers to have foreign films copied in Brazilian laboratories beginning January 1, 1953. These new regulations stated that import licenses would be granted for only one copy of black and white 35 mm. pictures, either positive or negative. These regulations were not enforced in 1953 and it was reported in March 1954, that a compromise had been reached on this question of making prints in Brazil.

BRITISH GUIANA—Other than the regulation that 10 per cent British feature films and 50 per cent British newsreels must be shown annually, there are no quota measures which might reduce or prevent distribution of U. S. films. All film revenue from British Guiana is remitted to the film distributors who maintain head offices in Trinidad.

CHILE—No special restrictions are imposed on the entry of United States motion pictures into Chile. For the past several years United States film distributors have encountered difficulty in obtaining foreign exchange to remit to their principals. From 1951 through 1954 there were no official allocations of dollars for motion pictures. The 1955 foreign exchange budget provides for $300,000 in United States currency and $150,000 in other currency for the importation of motion pictures. In November 1954 the peso was devalued from 110 to the dollar to 200 to the dollar at the official rate of exchange. Remittances were reported to be running about a year or more behind, with the lag being chiefly due to the reluctance to make remittances at the free market rate because of the gap separating the official and free market rate. The free market rate at the end of 1955 was about 700 pesos to the dollar. Import permits are required for United States films.

COLOMBIA—There are no quota contingent measures in effect at the present time which reduce or prevent distribution of United States pictures in Colombia. Import permits are required for all merchandise brought into the country. Distributors of United States films have encountered no difficulty in obtaining import permits. The problem of remittance of film royalties on foreign films has largely disappeared. Royalty remittances are almost up to date and there seems to be little reason to expect that remittances will again be held up.

ECUADOR — There are no trade restrictions which prevent or restrict distribution of United States films in Ecuador. Motion picture films imported into Ecuador are included in List II, and foreign exchange for film remittances must be obtained in the legal free market. It is reported that dollar exchange is available for such remittances.

PARAGUAY — The only restrictions imposed on the importation of motion picture films are those arising from the severe shortage of foreign exchange available for items classified by the Bank of Paraguay as non-essential for import purposes. Agents representing United States producers feel that the Bank is relatively free in granting foreign exchange for film importation. The foreign exchange situation, however, has probably caused exhibitors to turn more and more to Argentine films which are more readily available. Import permits are issued by the Bank of Paraguay on the basis of monetary expenditure per program.

PERU—Motion pictures may be entered without license or authorization of any kind. The status of remittances of film earnings remains unchanged. Applications for the revalidation of official exchange purchase permits granted through August 1948 are still pending action. Foreign exchange for remittance of film earnings since August 1948 must be obtained in the free market.

SURINAM—In Surinam each exhibitor of films is limited in his exhibition by currency exchange restrictions. Each exhibitor is allowed exchange for U.S. currency in proportion to his volume of business and it is reported that 75 per cent of the allowed quota may be remitted in dollars and the remaining 25 per cent in pounds sterling. Import licenses are required and are granted only by permission of the Foreign Exchange Control

URUGUAY—Import permits are required and applications must be made to the office of the Contralor de Exportaciones e Importaciones for both an import license and the necessary foreign exchange. Films imported from countries having exchange or payments agreements with Uruguay seldom experience any difficulty in entering the country. But the importation of films from the United States, which has no such agreement with Uruguay, is dependent upon the general availability of dollar exchange. Film imports are included in the non-essential or luxury class for the purpose of allocation of exchange. Remittance of film royalties is effected at the free market rate. Importers of U. S. films frequently find it necessary to resort to "switch" transactions to enable them to import their films.

VENEZUELA—No permits are required for the importation of motion pictures nor the the purchase of exchange in payment of such imports. There are at present no import or foreign exchange restrictions which would serve to restrict the showing of U. S. films in Venezuela.

MEXICO AND CENTRAL AMERICA

MEXICO — Since February 1949 an import permit has been required for motion picture films. There are no quantitative restrictions on the importation of motion pictures and no difficulty has been encountered in the transfer of dollar exchange. However, early in 1954 the Mexican peso was devalued from 8.65 pesos to the dollar to 12.50 pesos to the dollar and this will undoubtedly affect the amount remitted from this market. It is not believed that there will be notable increases in theater admissions that might offset the loss by devaluation, as the Mexican Government imposes a ceiling on theater admission prices.

A new tariff, representing a 60 per cent increase on positive prints of motion pictures imported into Mexico was put into effect on October 11, 1952. The duty, which was formerly 25 pesos per legal kilogram plus 10 per cent ad valorem was raised to 40 pesos per legal kilogram plus 10 per cent ad valorem.

COSTA RICA—No quota or contingent measures are in effect in Costa Rica that might interfere with the showing of United States films. There are no restrictions prohibiting or limiting the transfer of foreign exchange, however, all exchange required for the payment of rentals must be obtained in the free makret at rates somewhat higher than the official rate.

EL SALVADOR—There are no trade restrictions designed to reduce or prevent the distribution of United States films in El Salvador. Import permits are not required and no difficulty is encountered in the transfer of foreign exchange. Practically all distribution of films was handled by the Circuito de Teatros Nacionales, a government monopoly. However, in October 1954 the theater promotion bill was passed encouraging private capital to construct and operate theaters. The bill provided for exemption from payment of duties on materials, supplies, and equipment used in the construction or improvement of theaters. It also provided that the Circuito, previously exempt from taxation, would be required to pay the same direct and indirect taxes, as private exhibitors in areas where independent theaters are constructed. As the result of this act, several persons and organizations announced their intention to finance the construction and operation of privately owned theaters and in October 1955 the first important independent theater was opened. The operator of this theater indicated that he plans to construct two other theaters. At the end of 1955 the Circuito operated 35 of the 37 theaters in El Salvador.

GUATEMALA—Import permits are not required and there are no foreign exchange restrictions that might hamper the distribution of United States films in Guatemala.

HONDURAS—Import permits are not required, and while foreign exchange for films, as well as all other foreign exchange transactions, must be cleared by the Foreign Exchange Control Commission, no difficulty has been encountered.

NICARAGUA—Importation of motion pictures into Nicaragua has remained unrestricted and import permits are not required. The banks, however, do not authorize foreign exchange at the official rate for the importation of motion pictures and distributors are forced to procure necessary dollars at the curb exchange rate which is somewhat higher.

PANAMA—Import permits are not required. United States currency is the medium of exchange in Panama and there are no restrictions prohibiting or limiting the transfer of funds.

CUBA—There are no laws in effect in Cuba that restrict the importation or exhibition of United States motion pictures; neither are there any exchange controls or quota restrictions which might hamper the marketing of pictures. In an effort to stimulate production of films in Cuba, the Government in 1952 authorized an Executive Commission for the Film Industry to advance producers up to 33 per cent of the production costs of a film against subsequent repayment from receipts. The Commission could also acquire studios and production equipment to lease to private producers at low cost, could hire studio personnel as necessary, and was to promote the film industry's development. However, production of motion pictures in Cuba has not expanded greatly as Cuban producers have been reluctant to undertake feature film production in the face of indifferent box-office returns for Cuban films. Late in 1955 it was announced that a production program would be launched in 1956 under the guidance of a U. S. film producer and with the financial backing of the Cuban Industrial and Agricultural Development Bank. The new Cuban corporation plans to produce feature length films and also short subjects and television films.

DOMINICAN REPUBLIC — No restrictions on importation of films or transfer of foreign exchange.

HAITI—No restrictions on importation of films or transfer of foreign exchange.

AFRICA

ALGERIA—The agreement between the United States film industry and the French Government also applies to Algeria and regulations concerning the importation of films are similar to those in France. The direct importation of films from foreign countries has practically ceased and normally all films are sent first to Paris for dubbing and then brought into Algeria. Import permits are not required for films imported from France but would be required for films from outside the franc zone in the event such films were to be paid for out of officially allocated foreign exchange funds. Playing time regulations reserve a portion of the screen time to the showing of French films. United States film earnings are either deposited locally or remitted to Paris.

ANGOLA—There are no governmental regulations in Angola tending to restrict or even hinder the presentation of American motion pictures in favor of those of other countries. Films are brought in and shown throughout the country irrespective of origin, and while permits are required for the importation of films, the distributors state that no difficulties are encountered in obtaining permits for their requirements. Since the great majority of imported films are received from Lisbon film distributors, foreign exchange presents no problem, as all payments are made in Portuguesse escudos. A few films are received from South Africa.

BELGIAN CONGO—Import permits are not required for motion pictures and although licenses are required for the transfer of foreign exchange, no difficulties have been experienced in securing dollars to pay for U. S. films

BRITISH EAST AFRICA—There are no legal restrictions placed on United States films entering British East Africa for exhibition. All films exhibited are received from South Africa for which sterling is paid and there is no problem of the shortage of dollars. United States films continue to dominate the market and it seems unlikely that any measures are contemplated to reduce the number of films imported. An estimate is made to the Government as to the number of films expected to be imported from South Africa and permits are freely granted by the imports controller.

EGYPT—The Egyptian Government has no quotas or contingent measures limiting the number of foreign films which may be imported and exhibited. The Government has an agreement with Egyptian exhibitors whereby a small percentage of their screen time is reserved for the showing of Egyptian films. Importers of United States films must apply to the Exchange Control for import permits and the necessary dollar allocations. No permits are required for films from soft currency countries. U. S. film companies are operating under a provisional agreement whereby 35 per cent of their earnings are eligible for remittance in dollars and 35 per cent is transferable in pounds sterling. Blocked U. S. film earnings may be used for the purchase of Egyptian products for export. There is no objection to U. S. films dubbed into Arabic, however, each company has agreed to limit the number of dubbed features it releases. A law effective April 4, 1954, levied a supplementary tax of five milliemes (about 1½ cents) on each admission ticket to movie theaters. The proceeds of this tax were to be devoted to the development of the Egyptian motion picture industry and to production of films. Early in 1955 it was reported that a proposal was under consideration to provide protection to the Egyptian film industry through increased customs duties, playing time requirements for Egyptian films, and a Government subsidy to producers. However, no action along this line was taken during the year. In February 1955, an order of the Egyptian Council of Ministers announced the formation of a new joint-stock company, The Nile Cinema Co., S.A.E., with a capital of 100,000 Egyptian pounds, entirely subscribed by the 44 founders of the corporation, practically all of whom are connected with the Egyptian motion picture industry. The purposes of the corporation are the production of motion picture films, the construction of theaters, and the financing and distribution of Egyptian and foreign films. The Egyptian motion picture industry has been suffering from what has been termed to be a low quality standard of films produced and the Nile Cinema Co. was formed to have a large firm with adequate facilities to undertake the production of high quality films. No information is available as to what this corporation has accomplished during 1955.

ETHIOPIA—The only trade restrictions on the importation and distribution of United States films in Ethiopia are the customs duties levied on them. Although exchange control measures are in effect, all United States films are obtained from Middle East distributors and are paid for in pounds sterling and to date the Exchange Controller has granted all requests for exchange to finance their importation.

FRENCH MOROCCO—Import permits are required for films which are imported from outside the French zone in the event such films are paid for out of officially allocated foreign exchange funds. Since almost all United States films are brought in from distribution offices in Paris, films usually enter without formalities. United States film companies usually send their franc profits to their head offices in Paris.

FRENCH WEST AFRICA—All foreign films are imported from France and may be freely imported without quota restrictions or import licenses. Film distributors handle their revenues in French colonial francs. There is a requirement that reserves a portion of the screen time to the showing of French films.

GOLD COAST—An import permit must be secured before goods can be imported into the Gold Coast and imports from the United States are allowed only if the item is essential and cannot be secured from the sterling area. All films, including those originating in the United States, are imported from the United Kingdom or from Nigeria.

LIBERIA—Import permits are not required and there are no restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange. No 35mm. films are exhibited in Liberia, only 16mm. films being shown in the three theaters in operation. There is one 35mm. theater in Sierra Leone which imports all of its films through the United Kingdom.

MADAGASCAR—Import licenses are required for motion pictures imported from countries other than France and for which officially allocated foreign exchange is required for payment. Films are usually imported from France and are paid for in francs. This does not mean that all films are of French production, about 60 per cent of the films received are of United States origin, but all films are dubbed in the French language before being imported. Regulations require that a portion of the theaters' screen time must be reserved for the showing of French films.

MOZAMBIQUE—Import permits are required, but film exhibitors have not had any difficulty obtaining films since most South African distributors have found it possible to accept payment for their rental fees in South African pounds. In those few cases where dollar payments were required, the exchange has been made available.

NIGERIA—The Government of Nigeria and the Gold Coast have agreed to a consolidated dollar allocation for both colonies for the purchase of United States motion picture films. Films imported into one colony are also shown in the other. Practically all films exhibited are brought in from agents in the United Kingdom. Import permits are required.

TANGIER AND SPANISH MOROCCO—Import permits into Tangier are not required. Tangier is a free money market and foreign exchange is available, though expensive. Most Tangier exhibitors pay for film rental in either Moroccan francs or Spanish pesetas. In Spanish Morocco exhibitors customarily show only Spanish films, although there is no requirement to do so. Spanish Moroccan exhibitors obtain their films from Spain and import permits are not required and foreign exchange is made available only through Madrid.

TUNISIA—Import permits are required for all importations involving foreign currency. Practically all of the United States films shown in Tunisia are imported from France, and enter Tunisia without import permit. Foreign exchange offers no immediate problem since films are usually paid for in francs. Trade sources state that there are no limitations on distribution of foreign films that have been dubbed into the French language. Playing time regulations reserve a portion of the theaters' screen time to the showing of French films.

UNION OF SOUTH AFRICA—A comprehensive import licensing system was established in the Union of South Africa, effective July 1, 1949, governing all imports from all countries, including the sterling area. Under this system, distributors of United States films are permitted freely to import their product under open license and are allowed to remit a portion of their film earnings, with the remainder being held in blocked accounts. During 1955 import controls in general were liberalized and it is believed that U. S. film companies were allowed to remit a substantial portion of their earnings. No information is available as to the amount of blocked funds or when they may be made available for transfer. There have been discussions about the eventual abolition of import controls in the next year or two and if this should occur it will have obvious implications for U. S. motion picture distributors. There has been no indication of any decline in the number of United States films shown in South Africa since the introduction of import controls in 1949.

SOUTH PACIFIC, ASIA, AND THE EAST

AUSTRALIA—The most serious restriction imposed on the distribution of United States films is that covering remittances to the United States of film royalties earned in Australia. From 1948 through 1950 payments of film royalties were restricted to 50 per cent of earnings returned in the base year 1946, however, the trade papers reported that in 1951 the Australian Government permitted the U. S. film companies to remit a larger percentage of their current earnings and permitted the transfer of some of the blocked funds. Import permits are required but there are no restrictions on the number of films to be imported. In the states of New South Wales and Victoria there are quota laws, determined yearly, which govern the percentage of Australian and British films to be shown. In New South Wales distributors are required to distribute a number of Australian films equal to three per cent of the total number of films distributed, and exhibitors are required to exhibit 2.5 per cent Australian films and 15 per cent British films. In Victoria the law provides a quota for Australian films which is the same as in New South Wales, but does not require the showing of British films. When it is not economically feasible to maintain this quota the restriction is waived and in practice the quotas are seldom adhered to.

BURMA—There are no quota or contingent measures which might restrict or prevent the distribution of United States films in Burma. Import licenses are required but are generally issued without much difficulty. In 1953 because of a 400 per cent increase in import duties for films, United States film companies withheld their films from the Burma market. In June 1954, when the Burma Government reduced the import duty and removed the sales tax on films, United States distributors resumed shipments of films into Burma. Then on October 1, 1954, the Burma Government in an effort to assist the Burmese film industry, increased the taxes on admissions to foreign films from 33 1/3 to 40 per cent, at the same time reducing taxes to Burmese films from 25 to 20 per cent.

In October 1954, the Cinematograph (Amendment) Act, 1954, which empowered the President to establish quotas for the exhibition of Burmese films and to set rental rates to be paid Burmese producers, was enacted into law. At that time it was announced that implementing regulations would be issued soon, however, as far as is known these regulations have not been announced. The scarcity of dollar exchange and the difficulty in remitting film earnings is another major problem encountered in Burma, and while little restrictions are imposed on the issuance of import licenses for films, earnings derived from the exhibition of these films are blocked.

CEYLON—United States films have been placed under an open general license in Ceylon and may be imported without an individual license. Exchange controls which came into effect in June 1948 have not seriously hampered the importation of films. Transmission of foreign exchange is controlled by the Controller of Exchange. The annual quota for motion pictures is about $200,000 established on a historical basis, using the year 1946 as the base period.

CHINA—The communist regime has taken over over complete control of production, distribution, and exhibition of motion picture films in all areas of China under their control and so far as is known, United States films are not being exhibited.

FIJI ISLANDS—Most films shown in the Fiji Islands are imported from New Zealand and payments is made in New Zealand pounds. Films imported directly from the United States would be subject to license requirements applicable to imports from hard currency areas.

FORMOSA (Taiwan)—Formosa, which prior to 1954 had unrestricted importation of motion picture films, established a film quota for the year ending June 30, 1955, of 444 features to be imported. For the year ending June 30, 1956 the import quota was again 444 feature films, and was to be broken down as follows: 327 for United States films; 63 for British, Italian, and French films; 24 for Japanese films; 20 for other countries; and 10 import permits are reserved by the Government. Only earnings based on a percentage of net theater receipts may be remitted from Formosa and earnings from flat rentals or under minimum guarantee are not legally remittable. Since June 1, 1954, foreign exchange remittances from Formosa have been subject to a 20 per cent Defense Tax based on the amount of foreign exchange applied for and approved. While there were reports during 1955 that dollar film remittances would be limited, no specific action was taken during the year.

HONG KONG—Import permits are not required for motion pictures but after delivery has been taken the motion pictures must be declared to the government for censorship purposes. A quota has been set up whereby theaters are required to show 7 days of British films for every 70 days of United States pictures. This has not been strictly adhered to because of the insufficient supply of British films. There are no measures making it mandatory to show Hong Kong produced films. No limitations are placed on the amount of foreign exchange transferred for motion pictures.

INDIA—Imports of motion pictures into India are regulated by licenses issued by Governmental import control authorities. Licenses are granted against quotas prescribed for individual importers. For the first six months of 1955 this quota was established at half of the company's best year's imports. The quota for the last half of 1954 was over 80 per cent of the company's best year's imports. Quotas are revised every six months. An importer must first apply to the Central Board of Film Censors in Bombay for an exhibition certificate. Importers under present regulations may repatriate so-called "net earnings," which are described as gross receipts less taxes, exhibitors' share, and administrative expenses. It has been estimated that the total of such remittances is currently in the neighborhood of $650,000 to $850,000 annually. Probably the greatest problem which faces U. S. film distributors in India is that of censorship. Importers complain that the censors are adopting increasingly strict standards.

INDONESIA—The principal difficulty encountered in distributing United States films in Indonesia is that of securing foreign exchange with which to remit film earnings. Negotiations have been carried on almost continuously during the past several years in Indonesia seeking to solve some of the problems there with regard to censorship, taxation, and remittance of film earnings. At the end of 1953 it was reported that an agreement had been reached providing for the remittance at the official rate of exchange of $1,700,000 of film earnings accrued during 1953 with the balance of 1953 earnings, about $400,000, to be invested in Indonesia. During 1955 it was reported that a deal calling for remittance of over $1,000,000 in U. S. film earnings from Indonesia had been concluded, representing earnings accrued in 1954. Also an amount of about $100,000 was to be made available, representing payment on bonds purchased by U. S. film companies in Indonesia in 1952. Still to be determined is the disposition of 1955 film earnings.

In November 1955, the Ministry of Economic Affairs announced the establishment of an annual quota of 424 films to be imported in 1956. The quota established was based on a domestic production of 100 films annually and was broken down as follows: United States 250; United Kingdom 30; Europe and Russia 70; China 20; India 30; Malaya 7; Philippines 7; and Egypt and Japan 10. The regulations provide that only two copies of each picture may be imported, importation of dubbed films is not authorized, subtitling is to be done in Indonesia as far as possible, and importation of films over three years old is not allowed. This is the first time that import quotas have been set for Indonesia and it appears that the restrictions are aimed at Asiatic films which offer strong competition to Indonesian productions.

United States film companies were also faced with the problem of obtaining permanent residence for their foreign managers in Indonesia. The Government claimed that this move was to provide more employment for Indonesians, and although U. S. film companies had difficulty in finding qualified Indonesians for the jobs, it is generally believed that this has now been completed. United States film companies have encountered difficulty in getting their pictures cleared by the Indonesian film censors, with 129 feature films rejected in 1954 compared to 86 in 1953.

JAPAN—The Japanese Government again set the quota of imports of feature films at 180 in the fiscal year ending March 31, 1956. This is the same number as authorized in the previous year. The quota is broken down as follows: 122 from the dollar area, 16 from the sterling area, 26 from other countries or the open account area, and 16 bonus permits to be awarded for outstanding films or to be granted as awards for exporting Japanese films. Remittances of film royalties from Japan are permitted within the following limits: For films imported under a percentage rental system, the remittance shall be limited to 24 per cent of distribution income when the non-residents share of the receipts is not more than 60 per cent and to 18.3 per cent when more than 60 per cent. For films imported under the flat rental system, allocations of foreign currency will be approved at the time permission is granted to the import contract. Accumulated yen earnings in excess of that allowed to be remitted were becoming sizeable and a matter of serious concern to the U. S. film companies. In December 1955, the U. S. motion picture industry negotiated a long-term loan with the Japanese Government to be used for electric power development purposes. The loan was for $7,500,000 and was for a period of six years and is payable in seven semi-annual installments after three years have elapsed. All payments of principal and interest will be remittable in dollars at the official rate of exchange prevailing at the time the payments are made. In return for this loan, it was reported that U. S. film companies could remit about $1,500,000 in current film earnings and that the remaining blocked funds of U. S. companies might be used for production in Japan and other film uses.

NEW CALEDONIA—Import permits for foreign films are not required, however, special authorization is needed to purchase foreign exchange. There is strict Government control of all transactions which require the transfer of foreign exchange. Permits for the use of foreign exchange are issued theoretically only for items considered of prime necessity. However, in actual practice it has been possible for film importers to obtain the foreign exchange required to fill most of their needs.

NEW ZEALAND—New Zealand law makes it mandatory for film distributors to acquire British films to the extent of not less than 20 per cent of the number of foreign feature films exhibited. There are no restrictions prohibiting or limiting the transfer of foreign exchange for films. Import permits are required but are freely granted. There is no customs duty, as such, on imported films, however, there is a Film Hire Tax which is assessed on the net receipts derived from the exhibition of foreign films in New Zealand. With respect to United States films imported into New Zealand the Film Hire Tax is levied at the rate of 25 per cent of such net receipts.

PAKISTAN—Import permits are required for motion picture films. The transfer of foreign exchange is limited by the Foreign Exchange Regulations Act of 1947, however, until the beginning of 1953 the Government's dollar position was such that the Act was rather liberally administered. Early in 1953 all licenses for the importation of films were cancelled to conform with the Pakistan general policy to reduce foreign exchange outlays to a minimum. In April 1953, the Government again authorized the importation of films from all sources to the extent of 50 per cent of the imports in 1952. During the first few months of 1954 no import permits were granted for United States films, however, in May 1954, it was announced that the Government of Pakistan had reached an agreement with the Motion Picture Export Association covering both import licenses and remittance of film earnings. This agreement provides that no quantitative restrictions will be imposed by the Government of Pakistan on the importation into Pakistan of all categories of films and accessories of MPEA member companies during the period January 1, 1954 to June 30, 1955. Earnings and dividends due up through June 30, 1954 may be remitted in full within a reasonable time thereafter. In the July 1, 1954 to June 30, 1955 period up to 850,000 rupees, if earned, will be promptly remittable to the United States on a monthly basis. Any earnings in excess of 850,000 rupees were to be blocked and the Government of Pakistan agreed to consider their transfer after July 1, 1955. At the end of 1955 information was not available as to negotiations leading to extension or revision of this agreement. However, no difficulty has been reported with regard to the importation of U. S. films into Pakistan. (The Pakistan rupee was devalued in 1955 from about 30 cents to 21 cents.)

PHILIPPINES—In June 1949 an Act was passed requiring theaters to exhibit pictures made in the Philippines to the extent of 10 per cent of their annual exhibitions. However, the playing time requirements of this Act have not been strictly enforced. Import licenses are not required for motion picture films. There are no quantitative restrictions placed on the imports of United States films, however, there are limitations on the remittance of film earnings. Licenses are granted to remit an amount equivalent to 72 per cent of the producer's share of current earnings, using the year 1949 as the base year. During 1955 the 17 per cent tax on remittances of foreign exchange was removed and replaced by a special import tax which applies only to merchandise imported and is not applicable to remittances.

SINGAPORE AND MALAYA—An import permit is required for the purchase and importation of motion pictures into Singapore. In considering an application for an import permit the Controller of Imports and Exports is guided by the advice and recommendation of the Official Film Censor. According to the Foreign Exchange Regulations, the purchase of foreign exchange for outward remittances is prohibited except with special permission of the Controller of Foreign Exchange. Each of the major U. S. film companies operating in Singapore has its own agreement with the Controller of Foreign Exchange. Ten per cent of the playing time, specifically 7 days out of each 70-day period, must be devoted to British films.

THAILAND (Siam)—Import permits are not required for films imported into Thailand and there are no restrictions on the transfer of foreign exchange covering film imports. Exchange for film remittances is obtained at the open market rate, which is now the only prevailing rate of exchange in Thailand following a revision of the currency structure in 1955. It was reported in December 1955 that legislation was being drafted to require theaters to show a certain proportion of movies produced in Thailand and establishing a government organization to assist Thai movie producers to make better pictures. No action had been taken on this legislation at the end of 1955.

ADEN—Import permits are required for all goods originating outside the sterling area. Aden, as a British Crown Colony, has regulations which state that no import permits will be granted for goods from Western Hemisphere countries except for articles which cannot be obtained from the sterling area or from European sources and the purchase of which cannot be deferred without serious loss to the community.

AFGHANISTAN—There are no trade restrictions of any type imposed by the Afghan Government on motion pictures, and no such measures appear to be contemplated for the future. No import or quota regulations are in force and, since there is no domestic production of films, no playing time restrictions. The problem of transferring foreign exchange does not arise because all films exhibited are obtained through distributors in India, Pakistan, and Egypt and are paid for in the currency of the country from which they are imported.

IRAN—The market for United States films is not restricted in Iran by any laws or regulations. The importation of films is subject to annual foreign exchange quotas which are fixed in rials. The quota for the year ending March 1956, has been set at 15,000,000 rials. However, the quota is not hard and fast and is frequently increased when exhausted. Films are classified as essential items in Category I for import purposes. Import permits are required. United States film companies usually sell the distribution rights to their films to an Iranian distributor for a specified period of time, the films to be destroyed at the end of that period. (In December 1955 the rate of exchange was 76.5 rials to the U. S. dollar.)

IRAQ—The Directorate General of Imports provides an annual allocation of foreign exchange for the importation of United States films. For the past few years this amount has been about $200,000 and has been divided among 8 firms to purchase U. S. films. Each of these firms is authorized to enter into a contract with one of the U. S. film companies. Permits are required to import films into Iraq, however, importers have no difficulty in obtaining import licenses. During 1955 Iraq had substantially more foreign exchange available and maintained a liberal import program for dollar items and it is generally believed that no problems have been encountered with regard to importation of films or the transfer of foreign exchange. There has been a tightening of censorship in Iraq with films depicting riots, revolutions, communism and anti-communism, and offense to royalty being especially objectionable.

ISRAEL — The scarcity of dollar exchange may tend to restrict the volume of business of United States film distributors in Israel. In principle, no importation of any article is permitted unless foreign exchange for payment of such article is available. For United States motion pictures, however, an agreement has been made whereby the importation of film prints is permitted leaving the question of dollar transfers for later negotiations. No dollar remittances are officially granted for film royalties. The Israel Government passed a law in July 1954 requiring that all movie showings of 90 minutes or longer in length shall include an Israel produced newsreel, and that all exhibitors must show a minimum of 4 hours of other types of Israel produced films each week. Israel now has two domestic newsreel companies. Exhibitors are presumably free to schedule the showing of two newsreels — one Israel produced and one foreign — if they so desire.

LEBANON—Import permits are required for motion picture films into Lebanon. Foreign Exchange is available to remit film earnings and no known obstacles exist which discourage entry of United States films.

SYRIA—The dissolution of the Syro-Lebanese Customs Union in March 1950 created some problems relative to film imports. Since the break the Syrian Government's policy has been "Syrian trade by Syrians." To carry this out the Government issued Legislative Decree No. 151 in March 1950, providing for representation in Syria of foreign firms. The result has been that Lebanese distributors, who formerly serviced Syria, must now sell the films directly to a Syrian firm or exhibitor for distribution throughout Syria. It is believed that practically all U. S. film companies now have representation in Syria. Foreign exchange for the importation of films is available.

THE BRAVE NEW WORLD

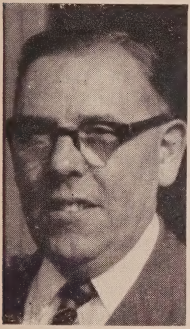
LONDON

BEYOND ALL ELSE, the factor which made the greatest impact on the motion picture business of the United Kingdom in 1955 was the clamantly announced entry of commercial television upon the scene. Eyes which for some years had anxiously been trained on the United States for guidance have now turned inwards to survey the reality.



CHARMAN

TV did not hit Britain with its second and more aggressive channel until September, and then only in one sector represented in general terms by the area of Greater London. The single transmitter put into operation by the Government-promoted Independent Television Association (ITA) limits its range to a heavily populated segment of England containing on a liberal estimate some 10,000,000 people, approximately one fifth of the entire population of the UK.

It will be supported in 1956 by two more stations covering the industrial regions centered on Birmingham in the midlands and Manchester in the north, bringing possibly a further 15,000,000 people within reach of competitive TV. A longer time may elapse before Scotland, Ireland and the outlying parts of England are absorbed into the ITA network. Some remoter districts have still to feel the impact of the British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC) visual transmitters.

If the force of competition with the motion picture theater were to be intensified by the choice offered to viewers between BBC and ITA it might have been expected to manifest itself in the London region. To no greatly appreciable extent does this appear, after the initial three months, to have happened. Over the entire country theater attendances have continued to slide at a perilous rate, but not significantly more so within range of commercial TV's Channel 9 than elsewhere.

The fact would seem to be that the mere existence of alternative programs does not lead of itself to the spending of more time at his video screen by the individual viewer. This is revealed in a BBC quarterly survey covering October through December, 1955, which shows that, while in the competitive area balance of viewing interest has swiftly moved in favor of the ITA channel, the average daily quota of viewing time has not increased.

Where competition has been heightened is through the stimulus which freer TV has given to sales of home receivers, although even here the trend was sharply checked when the Government, as part of national anti-inflationary measures, hardened its regulations concerning buying on time by compelling a down payment so high as to discourage potential buyers, particularly those in lower salary brackets. This in part explains why, as the BBC reports, the daily viewing audience in the UK increased through 1955 by only 1,000,000, of which the London region claimed no more than its strictly proportionate share of 170,000.

The situation may be summed up this way; any gains which the ITA channel has made from competitive entertainment media have been at the expense of (a) BBC television, (b) BBC sound radio and, much less significantly, (c) movies.

When the hard experience of American exhibitors was so greatly in contrast with this, it may be wondered why the British have been able to hold the invader at bay. The answer may be found in the difference between sponsored TV as the United States knows it and the commercial system authorized by Parliament in the UK. While the former permits unlimited control of programs by sponsors, the latter permits no interference by advertisers beyond the buying of simple time between programs or during so-called "natural breaks" in them. This means that the commercial interest cannot, or should not, dictate matters of programming, which is wholly the responsibility of the program contractors and the ITA itself.

As a result, actual program building is operated on lines very similar to those of the BBC, except in so far as the new authority is obliged to popularize its material to ensure maximum viewer interest at times at which it is inserting its commercials. In the analysis there is no predominant choice of interest between the competing channels. The casual viewer would often have difficulty in deciding which he was viewing, both material and artistes deriving from the same pool. This, however, does not operate where filmed material is concerned, the ITA commanding most of the better-known American TV series, notably "I Love Lucy," "Liberace," "Inner Sanctum," "Dragnet," "Gun Law" et al.

But even if the added power of television has not menaced the theater box office to the extent that had been feared, it has created special problems for the motion picture industry. Chief among these is the modus vivendi which will be adopted between the two. At the year end the industry was still at sixes and sevens, despite attempts by the major trade associations to draft a "code of standards" which would determine the relationship.

Here the pattern may appear thoroughly familiar to American eyes. On the one hand the battalions, composed mainly of exhibitors, who want no compromise with the new medium, who consider it a deadly foe which must be fought with every weapon at the industry's command. On the other those forces who hold that what cannot be resisted must be accommodated and that it is better to have TV as an ally than as an enemy. The latter, chiefly representative of producers and distributors, show in general an anxiety to talk turkey with both BBC and ITA, with the webs themselves equally prepared to smoke the pipe of peace with them. This is no more than natural.

Under the former monopoly system all movie companies enjoyed a remarkable freedom of the air. From the earliest days of radio they found the BBC cooperative in broadcasting programs of film material combining entertainment and deliberate publicity value. Every ingenious ruse has consistently been employed to plug personalities, stories, music and other elements, until movies found themselves commanding perhaps as much as 12 hours of nationwide radio time weekly. Development of television after World War II only provided a second medium, and the companies were quick to learn that the priceless sound publicity could be reinforced with the immeasurably greater power of visual propaganda.

The BBC was equally prepared to play ball, valuing the wealth of entertainment material that movie business could contribute to its lengthening daily output. This reached a peak several years ago in a weekly TV series called "Current Release," in which five or six new productions passed in review during a key evening viewing period. As a matter of interest, the program rocketted to a top position in popularity ratings.

Came a time, however, when the voracious appetite of the BBC began to frighten the movie people. Insistent pressure from the network for feature length material caused a reaction in the trade spearheaded by the exhibitors, and in 1952 the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association, representing 97 per cent of the UK's theaters, produced a ruling that its members would not trade with companies which sold pictures to TV. Since then, although the rule has proved progressively more inoperative, the CEA has consistently braked every move by the trade to draw nearer to television. Ironically enough, theaters which had subscribed to the resolution which aimed at preventing theatrical pictures reaching TV were to find themselves booking pictures which had expressly been made for the competitive medium when, ingeniously, such companies as that operated by Douglas Fairbanks evolved the plan of linking three 30-minute films made in London for the American webs into features along the lines of successful movies like "Trio" and "Quartet."

Commercial TV has aggravated the situation by openly bidding for feature pictures, knowing there are vast libraries available from both American and local sources. The ITA contractors, including such powerful groupings as Associated Rediffusion (A-R) and Associated Television (ATV), who control the London time, no less than such movie interests as ABC Television (a subsidiary of Associated British Pictures Corporation) and Granada TV Network (Sidney Bernstein), who will operate in the Birmingham and Manchester regions respectively, are equally alive to the vast storehouse of entertainment potential deriving from the picture business.

With producers and distributors as attracted to these new publicity channels as they have been to the BBC, the situation became so tense that in the fall of 1955 the films trade elements combined in an effort to regulate it by preparing a code of standards, as mentioned higher up. This they have so far been unable to do, chiefly because of the stand-patter attitude of the CEA which, besides insisting that any film excerpts offered to the networks shall not exceed five minutes in duration, has recently reaffirmed its 1952 resolution, thereby producing a virtual stalemate.

1956 opened with the problem unresolved and unlikely to be so — except by Time itself.

ENGLAND—A SURVEY

IF TELEVISION was the factor which made the biggest impact on the UK motion picture business in 1955, there is still one of far greater proportions and of more vitally serious implication — the entertainments tax. This rides high beyond all as the problem which jeopardizes the industry in general and British production in particular. The business just cannot take it any longer. It is as simple as that.

In a market so relatively small as Britain's — the overall population of the United Kingdom can loosely bet set at 50,000,000 — native film production cannot hope to succeed domestically without (a) improving its gross or (b) reducing its cost. The American companies are well aware of their own difficulties in matching domestic income to production and distribution expenditures, even with a market three times greater than Britain's and with a modified seat tax which draws off proportionately several times less of the box office gross than that which UK exhibitors have to face. On such a comparison many will wonder how British producers can operate at all. Among those many are the British producers themselves.

Hard and disciplined experience has proved the limits of studio economy. Today successful features can be made at an all-up cost nearer to £350,000 than the £600,000 which was the rule several years ago. Local box office winners of the calibre of "Doctor in the House," "Doctor at Sea" and "Genevieve," would, for example, probably budget out near to the former figure. Against this, a major hit such as "The Dam Busters" proved in the UK in 1955 would still demand a maximum budget, to say nothing of various other ambitious ventures which failed to measure up.

But on average a return to the producer of £500,000 could see him clear on a picture, although it might leave him without a profit on his enterprise. Unfortunately, even this modest figure is in broad terms almost beyond the power of the domestic market. That is the problem in a nutshell.

Admittedly there is an overseas take to add to the local gross, and in 1955 British producers proved more assiduous than ever before in cultivating this ground. But it still has to be faced that many British pictures are still not universally acceptable and that in the dollar market in particular their headway has proved disappointingly slow. Whatever the reasons, the facts remain. It has been stated that a British producer can match his world earnings with his local receipts, although this is, of course, a matter of taking the problem at its optimum rather than at its average. The truth is that, in spite of the domestic and overseas success of some Brtish film, there are not enough of them to offset the rest and to ensure the studios a profitable operation.

Basically, therefore, the solution must be found domestically, the more so because the prosperity of the theaters themselves is subject to the same restraints as those which afflict production (and, even if in a lesser degree, distribution). And there is only one answer. The industry must get more out of the box office. There are three ways to do this: (1) by getting more customers into the cinemas, (2) upping the seat prices, (3) reducing the Government's rake-off. This places the industry on the horns of a three-pronged dilemma.

Prospects of an increase in attendance received a severe jolt in figures produced by the Board of Trade, revealing that over the first nine months of 1955 average weekly admissions had dropped from those of the same period in 1954 by 2,000,000, the worst slump on record. Due in part to a comparison of the summer seasons of both years (1954 was wet and produced attendances of 25,927,000 weekly, whereas 1955 was hot and dry and kept admissions down to 22,200,000 during the 13-week period) the trend is nevertheless such as to discourage any hope of improving the gross via attendance. It equally discourages any prospect of recovery through increased admission prices.

This leaves the seat tax as the only front which can be attacked with any expectation of victory. In 1956, therefore, the industry plans its greatest campaign ever against the Treasury backed by the most impressive show of solidarity it has ever given. With more wisdom than has characterized the efforts of some previous attempts an intensive study has been made of the prime needs of producers on one hand and the exhibitors on the other to integrate both into a case for substantial reduction in the tax and an easing of its incidence on seat prices at differing levels. It is hoped in this way to guarantee a better return to the British producer without calling on the theaters to foot any part of the bill and, in fact, permitting relief to the smaller and marginal cinemas of whom many hundreds face the prospect of extinction.

It is this seat tax campaign which has helped to bring the industry to what is hoped will be a state of complete unity to face vital problems which lie before it during both the current year and 1957. Shortly the trade must consider what representations it shall make to the Government in regard to a new Film Act. This is the law which runs for 10-year terms and which determines the British film quotas and other trading conditions.

This becomes of more than normal importance because of the changing pattern of the market, which has followed world trends of decreasing first feature product and virtual elimination of second features. Exhibitos in the UK insist, and on reasonably supported evidence, that the patron remains faithful to the double feature program, and that he should therefore be guaranteed a supply of supporting material. His difficulties in this regard are heightened by a lack of American B product and by the folding of practically every domestic source of supply. This latter, brought about by the failure of local producers to command an equitable price from the theaters, is under probe by the British Film Producers Association.

That body, in turn, is greatly exercised over the future of its own major members and may well incline towards asking the Government for an even greater measure of protection than they now enjoy and have enjoyed for many years. The existing quota for first features is 30 per cent, calculated on a picture-for-picture basis. (For supporting features and shorts the rate is 25 per cent, reckoned on a footage basis, newsreels being excluded from the calculation.) The BFPA and its sister organization, Association of Specialized Film Producers, may not urge the seemingly impracticable step of increasing these percentages, but recommend instead extra assistance through the Eady levy, a direct toll on the box office imposed in close conjunction with the seat tax. A clash which this would almost inevitably bring with the CEA may be avoided by an agreement already reached that this levy shall not prejudice any reduction in the tax which the exhibitor may win. The tax situation has been discussed earlier on.

These main issues, together with the prospect of reorganization of the National Film Finance Corp., which assists production with loans of Government money, and insistent demands by the trade unions for even tighter State control of the industry, led during 1955 to suggestions that the Board of Trade might undertake a new full scale probe and once more drag the trade's affairs under the spotlight of Parliamentary debate. Guided by John Davis, who, although president of the BFPA and deputy chairman and managing director of the Rank Organization, made pronouncement in his personal capacity, the leading associations are now mulling favorably a proposal from him that they shall unite in setting up an exhaustive inquiry of their own and submit recommendations to the Board of Trade which could check any need of further Government interference.

Worth noting here is that Davis last year gave a valuable lead towards trade solidarity by taking his powerful Odeon and Gaumont circuits back into the CEA, from which they had been withdrawn in 1954 on a dispute over operation of the Eady levy. An event which conduced to this reconciliation was the sudden and dramatic death in June of Walter R. Fuller, who, as general secretary of the CEA for nearly 30 years, had dominated its policy regardless of opposition. The return of the Rank circuit to the Association could not be foreseen while he remained as its principal permanent officer, and it was not surprising that his death should have been followed by an immediate adjustment of CEA thinking in regard to its relations with the BFPA vis a vis the entertainment tax and the Eady levy.

Beyond its domestic upheavals the British industry in 1955 developed an aggressive attitude towards overseas selling, with John Davis, after assuming the BFPA presidency, vigorously leading the fight. In addition to the efforts of his own group to crack the United States market, he inspired an attack on the annual Venice Film Festival in August which gave the British a runaway propaganda victory against all comers.

Since then, by planning spectacular participation in the main 1956 international events and by such demonstrations as a recent major play in Helsinki, Finland, and the Scandinavian countries, he has further evidenced a policy of getting into the ring and punching a way to victory.

But, while British production maintained a positive front in 1955 — the pollsters placing seven domestic features in the year's 12 box office winners, with "The Dam Busters" a clear first — it suffered at least one major casualty when Reginald P. Barker and Sir Michael Balcon announced the sale of their famous Ealing Studios to the BBC, which is to use it as the home base for its television film unit. Although Baker and Balcon proclaim that their production activity will continue through 1956 and beyond on the same level as previously, the loss of Ealing must be held a serious blow to an industry whose major studio resources have never been much more than adequate.

A second grievous blow, incidentally, was the death just as this volume was going to press of Sir Alexander Korda, who had done more than any other single man to give prestige and quality to Brish films, and whose sponsorship last year of such outstanding productions as "Summertime," "A Kid for Two Farthings," and "Richard III" showed that his creative genius was still in full flower.

CENSORSHIP

AN ORGANIZATION established by the trade years ago, the British Board of Film Censors, deals with the censorship of films in Great Britain. It is not a statutory body, and whether a film is accepted or rejected, the final decision rests with the local licensing authorities throughout the country —about 1,000 in number—but almost universal acceptance is given to the decisions and control exercised by the Board, and generally the situation is considered satisfactory.

In connection with the power of local authorities, it should be noted that when a film is rejected by the Board of Film Censors, an application for special review can be made to local authorities, and a few notable instances have occured where the procedure has resulted in local exhibition of the rejected film.

It might be mentioned that there are three grades of certificates issued; "U" relating to a film which has been passed for universal exhibition; "A" is recommended more especially for adult audiences, and under most licensing authorities, children must be accompanied by adults when attending.

The third category, formerly known as "H" (meaning horrific), was replaced in 1951 by a new "X" certificate. This legally limits the showing of pictures so labelled to persons of over 16 years old. Neither an "adults only" or "horrific" classification, it serves for both, but also permits exhibition of sophisticated, adult entertainment, chiefly French, which a grandmotherly Censor Board formerly rejected. The "X" certificate has survived the early danger of being regarded by patrons as the hallmark of lurid entertainment, but has caused concern to American distributors who have found their more brutal pictures put into this group instead of the more acceptable "A" category.

During 1955 a significant change took place in the U. K. trade attitude towards the "X" certificate. Whereas both major circuits had previously denied bookings to films in that category, as being inimical to the family trade, Associated British Cinemas discovered that these pictures give excellent box office results; their second highest gross of 1955 was with a dual bill of two "X" pictures. The Rank chains have since also modified their policy.

EDUCATION

IN 1946 EDUCATION AUTHORITIES and teachers, in conjunction with the Ministry of Education, set up an organization named the National Committee for Visual Aids in Education. One of the Committee's main functions is to collate the views of education authorities, teachers and bodies concerned with education. Other functions include the consideration of the production, assessment and distribution of visual material.

An important link in the organization of production is the Scrutiny Committee, which views the completed film and has the power to accept it on behalf of the National Committee. The Educational Foundation for Visual Aids then receives the film. This organization was set up to ensure the production of the films planned by the National Committee and their distribution throughout the schools. Where local authorities are considering setting up a visual aids library a local joint visual aids committee is usually also set up to advise on the choice of material.

TAXES

IN ADDITION to the national Entertainments Tax which is specific in amount for each price category of tickets, there are income taxes and local rates which are applicable to motion picture theaters.

While not considered in the direct category of taxation there is a special related feature worthy of note under the Sunday Entertainment Act, 1932, which gave local authorities permission to open and regulate cinematograph theaters on Sunday. The local authorities alone have the power to give such permission and it is estimated that nearly 70 per cent of the approximate 5,000 theaters in England are now permitted Sunday opening.

It is provided under this Act that the local authority shall demand from the theater a proportion of the profits for that day, part of which sums collected shall be used for local charitable purposes and another proportion paid into the Cinematograph Fund. Under the direction and control of the Privy Council for the purpose of encouraging the use and development of the cinematograph as a means of entertainment and instruction. Something like nine or 10 thousand pounds sterling is now received into this central fund annually and the principal use for it has been in supporting the British Film Institute, which is active in the promotion of the use of motion pictures for educational purposes.

The amount paid into the national "Cinematograph Fund" is only equal to about five per cent of the total collected by the various local authorities, the balance collected under the Sunday Entertainment Act, 1932, being devoted to local charitable purposes. Last year £438,900 was paid in Sunday tax by theaters.

In order to provide facilities for the troops to see films on Sundays, an emergency law regulation was passed in 1939 whereby, on application from local councils, licenses to open on Sundays were granted to 290 kinemas which ordinarily did not open on that day. The Act empowering this came to an end in February, 1946, but it was open to local councils to put in force the Sunday Entertainments Act of 1932, or apply for a draft order, so that the Sunday opening of kinemas can continue without interruption. Most of the local authorities of areas where Sunday opening was permitted have now applied for permanent powers to grant Sunday opening.

An important point in regard to Sunday kinema performances, was brought into prominence in 1954 by a High Court decision that licensing authorities could impose a condition excluding children under 16. Later it was decided not to ban children under 16.

In 1954 the Cinematograph Exhibitors Association had discussions with officials representing the Secretary of State for Home Affairs, who, although sympathetic, offered little hope of obtaining Parliamentary support for any legislation to amend or modify the 1932 Act.

The beginning of 1956 faces theaters, as indeed all property owners, with drastically increased valuations (known as rating assessments) for local taxes.

COPYRIGHT RELATIONS

UNDER BRITISH LAW and practice the interest of the author and producer are fully protected. The ordinary legal reference is the Copyright Act of 1911 as amended. Great Britain entered into copyright relations with the United States on July 1, 1891; extended April 9, 1910; further extended January 1, 1915. Great Britain is a member of the International Copyright Union at Berne. A copyright law now in passage through Parliament will specifically protect motion picture rights for a term of 50 years.

Remittances to America in respect to films before the war were estimated at about £7,000,000 annually. During the war they had been; to October, 1940 — 4.8 millions sterling; 1941—5.7 millions sterling; 1943—26.5 millions; 1944—15.6 millions; for the five months to July, 1945—13.3 millions. Estimated remittance in 1951 under the Anglo-U.S. agreement was between eight and nine million pounds. In 1952-53 and 1953-54 the figure has remained very much the same.

THE RANK GROUP

(In June, 1955, J. Arthur Rank revealed that two years previously he had reorganized the affairs of the private companies which controlled Odeon Cinema Holdits, Ltd., in turn controlling the entire Rank Group, so that control of the voting power of the group is now vested in a company limited by guarantee and without share capital. The right to receive the major part of dividends, etc., from the Group in respect of his own former holdings had been vented in trustees to apply the proceeds for charitable purposes.

The directors of the company and the trustees of the charity comprise Rank and Mrs. Rank, Lord Mackintosh of Halifax, John Davis and Rank's professional advisers. Neither Rank nor Mrs. Rank have retained any financial or voting itnerest in the Group for their personal use.

As a result of this reorganization, according to Rank, the control and operation of the Rank Group will be unaffected by his death, "and the control of the Group is firmly established in British hands for the future.")

CANADA IN 1955

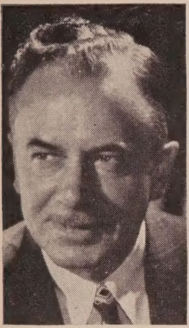
By CLARE J. APPEL

Executive Director, Canadian Motion Picture Distributors Association

TORONTO

CANADIANS continued to live in an era of wide-spread prosperity in 1955. Business improvement is still at a steady pace forward. Currently (Dec. 1, 1955) it is about 10 per cent better than a year ago. The rise in profits of many companies has been impressive. Net profits of 22 diversified companies, in the first nine months of this year, were up more than $72 million, a gain of 28.8 per cent over a similar period in 1954.

Domestic exports for the first nine months of the year were valued at $3,145,560,000, an increase of $329 million over the same period in 1954. Not enough, however, to offset a deficit in the foreign trade account by many millions. Senior officers of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce recently called on Prime Minister St. Laurent and his cabinet to overhaul Canada's foreign trade policy to rectify the large unfavorable balance.



APPEL

With Canada's export trade ahead of last year its internal markets also continued to grow by reason of a constantly increasing population. Manufacturers are alive to these developments and expansion of present plants, together with new industries, are chartered for the future. Government policy on immigration is designed to achieve a population of 30 million by 1975.

While industry expanded and retail sales hit a new high, the motion picture industry in 1954 showed its first decrease in income in more than two decades. The reason—expanding television outlets, record-breaking sales of autos and an increasing number of night attractions competing for the amusement dollar. And the facts must be faced—when the final figures are in for 1955, a further drop in income for distributors and exhibitors will be recorded.

THEATERS

There were 1,857 regular theaters operating in Canada as of Apr. 1, 1955; 112 had closed in the past three years with the majority of closings taking place in 1954-55. During the season 228 drive-ins were doing business, 56 having opened during 1954-55.

Theater admissions in all Canada were lower in 1954 (latest figures available) by 22,674,073 from the 1953 figures. Receipts showed a drop, for the first time in 20 years, of $3,877,221. Drive-in receipts increased $454,027, accounted for by the addition of 56 in 1954.

The major drop in receipts occurred in the big revenue-producing province of Ontario and Quebec. Ontario was off $2,301,249 and Quebec down $2,899,030 in 1954 from the 1953 figures. Other provinces showing a drop in theater receipts were New Brunswick down $48,304 and British Columbia $309,635. All other provinces were ahead of their 1953 figures in receipts but Ontario and Quebec providing approximately 62 per cent of the national income for theaters and distributors, brought the national income down.

DRIVE-INS

Drive-ins totaling 228 were in operation in all of Canada in 1954. This is an increase of 56 over the preceding year. Construction of new drive-ins is now at a standstill as is the case with standard theaters. Not more than a dozen have opened in 1955 and several of those built have closed for lack of patronage. Open airers are not permitted in the province of Quebec which accounts for the relatively small number for all Canada. Total receipts from drive-ins in Canada for 1954 were $6,316,974.

TELEVISION

With 31 stations on the air at the end of November, 1955, 80 per cent of the population was within reach of at least one of them. Canada is now the second television country in the world and this has been reached in three and one-quarter years under Government control. Licensed and still to go into operation in the Spring of 1956 are Charlottetown, P.E.I., Jonquiere and Sherbrooke in Quebec and Timmins and North Bay in Ontario.

Heaviest sales of TV sets are lately recorded in the Maritime Provinces where a Government station recently opened. The total number of sets in Canada is estimated at 1,810,211.

Construction of antenna and wave-guides to be installed at 39 points is now underway by Bell Telephone and other companies. This will establish a micro-wave net work for coast-to-coast hook-up. Another reason for the theater proprietor to strip for action in a fight for the leisure time of the people in his community.

DISTRIBUTION

Distribution of films continues from six exchange centers namely: Saint John, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Calgary and Vancouver. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics does not break down income from film rentals according to the exchange center. Based on theater receipts from the various provinces, it may be said that each distribution point can be rated percentagewise approximately as follows: Saint John 7.8 per cent; Montreal 24.2 per cent; Ontario 39.9 per cent; Winnipeg 9.6 per cent; Calgary 8.3 per cent and Vancouver 10.2 per cent.

SAINT JOHN

Saint John in New Brunswick supplies theaters in the four Maritime Provinces of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Newfoundland. Theater receipts, excluding taxes in each province for 1954 were: New Brunswick, $2,675,844 for 62 theaters; Nova Scotia, $4,283,840 for 84 theaters; Prince Edward Island $397,529 for 14 theaters and $1,301,452 from 67 theaters in Newfoundland.

MONTREAL

The exchange center of Montreal serves the predominately French speaking province of Quebec which had 451 theaters operating in 1954 with total theater admissions of $22,506,182 exclusive of tax. This represents approximately 24 per cent of the national income from standard theaters.

Many native French dialogue pictures are imported into Quebec and these account for a considerable portion of the box office receipts in the province.

Quebec theaters operate seven days weekly but no children under 16 years of age are permitted to attend. Many youngsters throughout the province see motion pictures in parish halls.

About one-third of Quebec's theaters use an entire program of English dialogue pictures. The dubbed version usually follows the exhibition of the English film by a year and more than two-thirds of all theaters use French dubbed features after the run of the English version.

There are about 88 theaters in the province which use an all-French movie program. Many of these films are made in France. Government regulations prohibit drive-ins in Quebec.

TORONTO

Ontario's 521 standard theaters reported receipts of $37,269, 532 excluding taxes in 1954. Toronto is the busiest of all exchange centers. Ontario theaters provide 37 per cent of the total seating capacity of all Canada's standard theaters and they provided about 37 per cent of the total box office receipts in such theaters; 84 of the 230 drive-ins operated in Canada in 1954 are in Ontario.

WINNIPEG

Winnipeg in Manitoba serves all of the theaters in that province, 29 in North Western Ontario and the balance in Southern and Eastern Saskatchewan for a total of 404 which includes many community enterprises operating one or two days a week only.

Both Manitoba and Saskatchewan censor boards function at Winnipeg.

Manitoba's 154 standard theaters had admissions of $5,169,144 in 1954. Inasmuch as theater receipts are reported provincially it is impossible to give an accurate breakdown of the receipts which might be credited to the exchange centers of Winnipeg or Calgary because both offices supply films to theaters in Saskatchewan.

CALGARY

Calgary serves 191 standard theaters in Alberta, 11 in Eastern British Columbia and 53 in Northwestern Saskatchewan as well as drive-ins in all three areas. Receipts from regular theaters within the province in 1954 were $8,464,959.

Alberta with its rich oil and gas fields is still attracting attention of capital investments from both sides of the border and England. Its ever expanding areas in which oil and natural gas have been discovered has brought new industry into what was, a few years ago, a wheat growing and mixed farming province. Gas pipe lines are now planned to serve thickly populated Ontario and the U. S. and with new fields being proved for oil in this province, as well as in Saskatchewan, a continued prosperous future is assured for the Canadian West.

VANCOUVER

There were 178 standard theaters operating in British Columbia in 1954 in addition to 30 drive-ins erected in the past four years. Three have closed. These are serviced from the exchange center of Vancouver and the standard theaters reported receipts of $9,890,408. This figure, reported by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, includes receipts from 21 theaters scattered throughout the Yukon and Northwest Territories.

FEDERAL AND PROVINCIAL TAXES

Amusement taxes collected in all Canada in 1,938 standard theaters in 1954 was $12,098,922. The tax on drive-ins fed another $721,630 into provincial coffers, while approximately $325,000 was collected by eight provinces for censorship fees of films. Added to this is a seat tax collected by the provincial governments from theaters in most provinces. The amount is unknown, but estimated at close to half a million dollars across Canada. This adds up to almost $1.00 a head for every man, woman and child in Canada.

Business forecasters were far too cautious in their predictions for 1955. A drop in theater receipts in Canada was expected and a recession in the number of admissions in 1954 were predicted in the Film Daily Year Book of 1955. However, motion pictures is the only industry of consequence to suffer and as television continues to expand in new areas the familiar pattern of a drop in theater-going in those places will occur.

A small part of the improvement in general business can be traced to the easy credit terms for the purchase of automobiles and more appliances of every description. There has been a further rapid expansion of consumer credit in 1955. Many observers believe it has been too rapid and that it will slow down.

However, it is reported that Bank of Canada officials have held confidential talks with representatives of chartered banks in connection with the rapid rise in consumer credit. Last August the central bank boosted its lending rate by ½ per cent to two per cent. In October another boost took place to make it 2¼ per cent and finally a third raise increased the chartered banks borrowing rate to 2¾ per cent, highest on record.

With credit buying still establishing new highs as the year ends it is thought that Federal financial authorities and the chartered banks have agreed to put brakes on lending to finance companies where it could stop the spiralling loans of chartered banks which reached $4,471,400,000 on September 30th—a rise of $403,400,000 from year earlier.

Domestic exports are running far ahead of the 1954 figure at a value of $383,913,000, about 53 million better than the nine months figure in '54. Iron ore, farm machinery, trucks, cars and parts with the wood and paper group showed the greatest dollar rise in exports. The failure of foreign trade, however, to balance its ledger, is in the opinion of experts, Canada's need to fashion raw materials into end products for sale to world markets.

For 1956? It must be repeated that Canadians have been and are now engaged in building a widespread prosperity and a standard of living without precedence in this country. With a continuing increase in population (now close to 16 million) and with more people with more money than ever before in their pockets and in savings accounts (close to $6 billion) its internal markets are growing and will continue to grow in the future. In 10 years Canada will be the home of 20 millions and their after-tax yearly income is estimated at a figure approaching 28 billion dollars. Experts predict that at that time the annual gross national product will be valued at $40 billion. The experts continuing say, that there were approximately 356,000 tax payers with incomes of $5,000 or more in 1953 and they expect to see this group increased three-fold in the next 10 years. There will, therefore be 1,100,000 earning $5,000 a year or more in 1965. Much larger domestic markets for finished products will result with manufacturing industries turning out many articles that have been uneconomical to produce in the comparatively small domestic market of the past.

The exhibitor and the distributor in Canada have a bitter struggle ahead in these next few years even though they be years of wonderful prosperity. Obsolete theaters are certain to close. But, the showman who works diligently to make his theater a social meeting place where people can enjoy motion pictures in interesting and comfortable surroundings will get his share of the prosperity that is forecast by competent observers in Canada for some years to come.

Never in history has there been so much money spent in advertising by the retail trade. Nor have theaters ever been faced with the wide variety of events and night shopping which reach out for the public's spending dollar. Added to these is the more competitive medium of television. If the exhibitor is to get his share of John Public's leisure hours and the money he has to spend during them, he must make an intelligent fight for public attention to his theater and he must win back recognition that his theater is a happy gathering place for the children, the teen-agers and the grown-ups, even if it has to be done by ringing door bells in his community.

THE INTERNATIONAL EXHIBITORS FEDERATION

By COMM. ITALO GEMINI

(Italo Gemini, head of the Italian Association of Film Exhibitors, which represents over 12,000 theaters in Italy, describes the aims and purposes of the International Federation of Film Exhibitors (UIEC), of which he is president. The global theater organization represents over 40,000 theaters serving over three billion spectators in Belgium, England, France, West Germany, Holland, Israel, Italy, Luxembourg, Sweden, Switzerland and the United States. The American affiliates, TOA and Allied States, joined the UIEC last Fall.)

ROME

THE CINEMA, it has been repeatedly said, is a unique phenomenon combining the characteristics of artistic creation with industrial activity. It is a phenomenon of particular social import, for it interests audiences of extraordinary range, evaluated in several billion persons.

These facts alone are sufficient to indicate the complexity of problems that constantly face the film industry and moviemakers. For an industry destined by its nature to operate on an international scale, these problems often go beyond the confines of individual countries and require, for their solutilon, the common contribution of conscience and action by different national film industries.

The problems interest everyone working in motion pictures, whether they be economic or of a productive nature, and sometimes they are not equally obvious.

Like the producers, and the distributors whose international union is now taking its first steps, we exhibitors have felt the need to band together to profit from the knowledge and experience of our colleagues in each country and to express the common thought of the group on questions connected with the development and progress of the film industry.

GEMINI

It was not the prospect of miracles, nor the idea of revolutionizing the film market with debates and proposals that induced European exhibitor associates to establish our union, but the realization that what was needed first of all was a solid understanding between exhibitors throughout the world in relation to their common problems.

Since its founding the union has expressed its aims and possibilities. Through it we have strived to coordinate insofar as possible the action of individual national associations, so as to assure exhibitor participation in negotiations along international lines dealing with problems of direct interest to exhibitors. The aim was also to increase the flow of exchange in data, news and information regarding the motion picture situation in each individual country.

The union's action and program for the future derives from its general assemblies, held twice a year. One is an ordinary session at Paris, and the other is a special convention which takes place every year in one of the member countries. (In 1955 the special convention was held in Rome.)

Last year the UIEC gave its greatest attention to four subjects: authors' rights, the new techniques, rental rates and relations with television. If we add to these four items the various fiscal and tax problems, I think we have listed the major questions which concern exhibitors today throughout the world.

Authors' Rights

As regards authors' rights, or rather the proposal to recognize royalty rights for various collaborators on a film, particularly the actors (the so-called "jure conventions" right for a percentage of the film's earnings), the UIEC could not help but ally itself with the international producers organizations, which maintain that such a system ignores and modifies the determining function of the producer, whose initiative translates into a completed film the multiple and diverse contributions of technicians and artists, and who alone assumes the risks of the undertaking.

In a free and open talent market the producer may voluntarily agree to pay a star a percentage of the earnings, but to transform this possibility into an actor's right would constitute a truly unique form of privilege.

The UIEC, therefore, has gone on record to state that it does not intend to recognize other obligations than those which customarily link the exhibitor to the distributor and that rental rates must implicitly include all royalty rights without imposing upon the exhibitor royalty payments for co-authors of the film. This reflects a basic concept—that a film is an individual industrial product and a unified creative work.

New Systems

As for the new projection systems, the UIEC recognizes that the introduction of the large screen has contributed greatly in creating new interest in films. In taking a realistic view of the problem, however, the organization has asked producers to make standard-screen films available to exhibitors not equipped with wide screens until a common standard projection system is found. While the question may be overlooked in the United States, whose economic vitality has permitted a rapid changeover to the new projetcion systems. the matter is of great importance in many countries where the cost of new equipment constitutes a grave concern for exhibitors, especially those who own small theaters.

On the other hand, we maintain that every effort must be made to bring the new-dimension film to every community, for this testifies as to the progress in motion pictures and is a valid antidote to the "fear of television." This fear is being recognized more and more by European exhibitors, although in a different form and range than is known in the United States. It is, nevertheless, a problem. In Italy, especially in small towns, bars equipped with TV are more crowded than movie houses on certain nights and to fight this phenomenon it is not enough merely to complain against TV, for this, too, can be an efficient instrument of social elevation.

It has been proposed, within the UIEC, to study the possibility of establishing a television channel reserved to motion picture theaters. The proposal, although it may not be an easily accomplished fact, warrants study.

It is my conviction that in the present evolutionary phase of motion pictures, it is not possible to plan long-term programs nor to maintain a rigidity in position which may become precarious by reason of national changes in the daily course of events.

The wide screen has accentuated the spectacular value of motion pictures in contrast to television. If, however, it is necessary to equip our theaters with "video" screens, we should be ready to do it.

Industry Problems

This is a rapid glance at the major problems examined by the UIEC in 1956. And now, what about specific problems of the exhibitor and of the film industry in general?

The dividing line is not great. The strict technical and economic inter-dependence between production and exhibition imposes the interest of both sectors on every question dealing with motion pictures. Production problems do not exist which do not regard, even if indirectly, the ex-exhibitors, nor may exhibitor problems be ignored by the producers. In the same way, one of the sectors may not enjoy prosperity while the other is in difficulty. This is an elementary fact when it is always borne in mind by the UIEC in its work.

I cannot finish this discussion without recalling that the UIEC has made positive strides in 1955. The adhesion of the two great American exhibitor organizations, the TOA and the Allied States, has given the organization new prestige and has assured it the precious contribution of the experience of exhibitors in the United States.

This victory over American "isolationism" is due to the merit of the exponents of the two organizations and in particular to Messrs. Blank, Reade and Martin of the TOA, Myers and Dollinger of Allied.

In talks with them during my trip to the United States last October, I was able to witness first-hand the profound capacity and preparation of the exponents of American film exhibitors and their sensibility toward problems of international collaboration.

Blank accepted my invitation to participate in the special assembly of our organization in Rome, and he made important contributions to the debates.

The UIEC meets in Paris next Spring. In the French capital we are counting on again seeing the representatives of TOA and to welcome for the first time those of Allied, which ratified its association with the union after the last assembly in Rome.

Perhaps the future will call on the film industry for new missions and responsibilities, in a world that is slowly but surely moving toward the common welfare of all.

A better undertanding and solid collaboration beyond the limits of political frontiers will aid us in fulfilling our duties most efficiently as exhibitors of the motion picture, which is an unsurpassed medium of knowledge, instruction and recreation.

IFFPA IN 1955

By DR. RENATO GUALINO

President, International Federation of Film Producers Associations

ROME

IN 1955 the Federation, besides representing the motion picture industry on an international level, pursued its various activities following a well definite policy in connection with the liberalization of international film exchanges decided upon by the Locarno General Assembly of 1954, selecting the international film festivals to which its member associations will ensure their cooperation, taking an active interest in all international legal questions which can be connected with film production. In addition to these main points the Federation has been concerned with many other problems of an internal or minor interest.

Along these lines, and according to the decisions taken by the General Assembly which took place in San Sebastian in July, 1955, and reaffirmed by the Washington Administrative Council of November, 1955, the Federation will pursue its policy also for 1956.

The policy followed by the Federation in the field of international film exchanges, foresees the intervention of the Federation first of all in those countries where difficulties to a complete contractual freedom have arisen.

The international film festivals to which the Federation has assured its cooperation for 1956 are: the International Exhibition of Cinematographic Art of Venice, the International Film Festival of Cannes, the International Film Festival of Berlin, the International Film Festival of Cork (Ireland) and the International Film Festival of Edinburgh. The Federation is now examining the opportunity of extending its approval also to the International Film Festivals of Karlovy Vary (Czecho-Slovakia) and of Locarno (Switzerland).

In the sphere of legal problems, the most important are those connected with copyright on films. In order to solve them, the Federation has already obtained from the Permanent Committee of the Berne Convention permission to examine the problems which, in the field of copyright, are connected with cinematography. Owing to the typically international nature of the film, these problems cannot be considered as limited to the countries of the Berne Convention, but naturally concern all the countries in the world which have an international commerce in films.

GUALINO

The Federation is also studying the problems connected with the draft of convention on the rights of performing artists, manufacturers of phonograph records and broadcasting organizations, in their connection with films.

At the same times the Federation ensures its cooperation to the economic and Social Council of ONU and to UNESCO, of which it is a member in a consultative status.

All these activities, while they aim for private initiative and of freedom of exchanges, at the solution of the difficulties which may arise in the fields of production and of international exploitation of films, also give, for the importance of the film as means of expression, an effective contribution to the higher finality of promoting a better understanding among peoples.

And it is in this spirit of friendly and sincere cooperation that the representatives of the 22 member Associations have been working all these years for the development and the success of cinematography in the world.

WHY DISTRIBUTORS ARE BANDING TOGETHER

By GOFFREDO LOMBARDO

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The man who has done more to organize the International Federation of Motion Picture Distributors Associations is the dynamic 34-year-old president of Titanus Films of Rome, Goffredo Lombardo.

One of the largest production companies in Europe, Titanus is also Italy's biggest distributor of Italian and foreign films. Speaking as a distributor, Goffredo Lombardo in this article tells how and why European distributors are banding together into a global organization.)

ROME

THE NEED for an international organization of motion picture distributors has become increasingly evident since the war. The situation as regards film distribution, especially in the European market, has undergone drastic changes in the past few years and distributors have recognized that to keep in step with these changes they must band together into a single, powerful supra national organization.

Since 1949, two important phenomena have characterized European motion picture activity: the rising average costs of producing films (in Italy, for example, costs doubled between 1949 and 1955) which means something must be done to intensify their exploitation and the progressive rise in the capacity of the European market to absorb motion pictures.

These factors have made the distributors recognize the necessity of a more intense expansion of films on the European markets. They have, at the same time, realized that the only way to achieve such expansion is to make possible a closer collaboration between the distributors of all nations.

The means for this collaboration is the International Federation of Motion Picture Distributors Associations (FIDAF). Following a preliminary meeting at Venice during last year's film festival, FIFAF's organizing committee, which I have the honor to head as president prov-tem, convened last October in Rome to lay the groundwork for the official constitution of the Federation at its first international congress in Madrid in March, 1956.

The aim of the Federation is to coordinate the activity of the various national film disdistributors' associations and, in particular, to protect the interests of distributors in their dealings with governments and national and international organizations of producers and exhibitors.

The Federation plans to establish a permanent central bureau for the exchange of information and data concerning the film industry in various countries, with special reference to economic, tax, legal, commercial and currency problems.

LOMBARDO

An international arbitration committee is planned to settle controversies arising between members of the Federation and between members of the associations, unions or other national organizations. The committee will also act on international disputes between film distributors on one side and producers and exhibitors on the other.

The Federation will strive to have affiliated countries adopt as standard the distribution systems and procedures practiced in the nation where distribution costs are lowest. In order to facilitate and intensify exploitation of films on the market, the Federation is organizing itself in such a way that it can advise on the type of films which may be exploited most adequately in relation to the number and capacity of theaters in each single market.

FIDAF plans to regulate the field of import and export of films by giving official recognition to the most serious and capable importers and exporters, thus eliminating unscrupulous fly-by-night middlemen who do serious damage to the commercial security of motion picture distribution.

As to the fiscal aspect of film distribution in each nation, the Federation will promote laws intended to streamline customs regulations and procedures on film imports and exports and to remove those obstacles which make international motion picture exchange difficult.

At present FIDAF is aiming at linking distributors of the most important European markets, which include Belgium, Denmark, France, Great Britain and Ireland, Italy, Holland, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and Western Germany. This is a market of enormous capacity with 335 million inhabitants and 40,000 theaters.

We want eventually to make FIDAF a global organization with the United States, Canada, South America as members.

In uniting the distributors of the European markets FIDAF will stimulate the motion picture industries in all its member countries. It is our hope that when FIDAF becomes a global organization it will be instrumental in bringing peace and order to the business of distributing films throughout the world.

JAPAN IN 1955

By GLENN F. IRETON

Manager, Far East Bureau, THE FILM DAILY

TOKYO

IN THIS SPACE last year, this writer reported that "the most important trade statement" made by Eric Johnston during his 10-day stay in Japan in late '54 was that the American industry would be interested in putting its frozen funds at the disposal of projects which would benefit the Japanese economy.

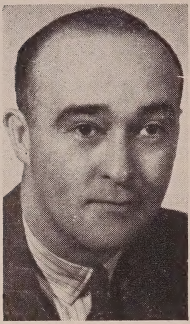
TOP DEVELOPMENTS

That statement began the biggest single news event of the '55 calendar year. Almost to a day, 12 months after the MPAA president enunciated this policy of the 10 American majors, the yen equivalent of $7.5 million was loaned to the Government-controlled Electric Power Development Co., Ltd., to be used for improving Nippon's hydroelectric industry. The loan is to run for six years and bears three per cent interest. Principal will be amortized by seven equal semi-annual installments starting in '58, which become remitaable in dollars, as does the interest, as due.

A remittance of $1.5 million became immediately available and the remainder of blocked assets—to Sept. 1, 1955—($3.36 million in yen) may be assumed to be well on the road to final remittance as this is being written.

MPEA v.p. Irving A. Maas negotiated the unprecedented deal with Tadashi Ishida, chief of the Foreign Exchange Bureau of the Japanese Finance Ministry.

News Item No. 2 of the year was the rapid increase in CinemaScope installations, with almost 700 reported at year-end. This factor had a lot to do with keeping up the total distribution revenue of the U. S. majors, as witness the one company—20th-Fox—that depended exclusively upon C-Scope product, upping its year's income some 182 million yen and climbing from fourth to second place among the 10 American companies.



IRETON

Others up for the year were UA, 142 million yen; Columbia, 88 million yen; RKO, 64 million yen; WB, 37 million yen; and AA, 25 million yen. Paramount was off 179 million yen; U-I, 141 million yen; Metro, 138 million yen; and Republic, 77 million yen. The grand total for the 10 in '55 was 7,666,002,445 yen, up slightly (9 million yen) from the '54 figure of 7,657,590,183 yen. (See per-company listings below.)

Actually the above figures cannot be competitively evaluated, unless several factors are also taken into consideration. Among such factors (almost impossible to equate fairly) is the length of time any company's product has been in distribution; another is the number of re-issues. However, some idea can be obtained from the number of fiscal quota licenses and their playoff during the last nine months of the calendar year. (See listings below.)

What might be called "The Year of Discovery" qualifies for News Item No. 3. This category, which underlines the cementing of ties in the international film industry, breaks down into several parts:

1) The West 'discovered' Japan—and other parts of Asia, as well—in terms of backgrounds for top pictures. 20th-Fox made locations for "House of Bamboo" in Nippon, as did Columbia for "Three Stripes in the Sun"; Metro laid the groundwork for "Teahouse of the August Moon," to be shot in early '56. France now has a crew here working on a co-production (with Shochiku) tentatively titled "Honorable Country Picnic."

2) The East 'discovered' the East. The Cathay Organisation of Singapore financed a quartet of Sino productions in Nippon, and, with Nagamasa Kawakita of Japan, producer S. K. Chang in the first Chinese feature in Eastman color ("Blood Will Tell"), also made in Japan. The Shochiku Co. of Japan made two films in Hongkong.

3) Further overseas: Shintoho made one in Hawaii, another in Brazil; and the Toho collaborated with Italy in turning out "Madam Butterfly."

4) Another phase of East-West relations—and, a mighty important one for both areas—has been the increasing travel by leading industry figures. Americans included: Arnold M. Picker, Max E. Youngstein, Andrew Albeck, Lowell Thomas, Henry King, Lacy W. Kastner, Bernard E. Zeeman, Larry Lipskin, James Stewart, William Holden, Jennifer Jones, Plato A. Skouras, George Breakston, Robert Ryan, Ava Gardner, Cameron Mitchell, Robert Stack, Brad Dexter, Jack Cummings, Tay Garnett, William Wyler, Wilfred J. Eadie, Dick York, Aldo Ray, Richard Murphy, Seymour Friedman, Lon Jones, Eugene S. Gregg, R. E. Warn, Wolfe Cohen, Samuel Schneider, John G. Glynn, Berry Greenberg, Alex Frieder, James E. Perkins, Spyros P. Skouras, Ben Cohn, Nate J. Blumberg, Alfred Hitchcock, the Todd A-O unit including Cantinflas of Mexico and Shirley MacLaine, various Cinerama executives—W. D. Fling and Robin International's Nicolas Reisini, Victor Orsatti, Joseph Newman, Dolores Donlon, Rory Calhoun and Lita Baron.

From England: David Lean. From France: Jacques Andrefouet, Yves Ciampi and Raymond Froment. From Italy: Silvana Pampanini, Emanuel Cassuto and Mario Cromo.

Japan had Shiro Kido, Shochiku's president, making his first global. Nagamasa Kawakita went to Europe; Masaichi Nagata and Yoshio Osawa to the U. S.

5) A precedent started by UI and Metro in '54 was continued with WB, Columbia and UA staging conventions in Nippon.

6) The Seasian Film Festival was staged this year—the second annual—in Singapore, with Japan again walking away with many top honors, but with the Premiere Studio of the Philippines also taking home several of the prime awards. This meeting ground for the producers of Southeast Asia is producing results. The pace may be considered slow by Western standards, but there was a lot of getting acquainted all-over-again business to be settled, and the contacts made at these festivals have created several co-productions and reciprocal activities.

7) Valuable East-West goodwill was exchanged through the Italian Film Festival staged in Tokyo (with tabloid versions in other parts of Japan). Italifilm President Guiliana Stramigioli deserved the major credit for setting up this project in major-league style.

8) Release of BCFC's British product was held up some nine months of the year, pending a new distribution deal, finally made with Columbia.

9) MPEA set Leo D. Hochstetter in as Asian manager, a post that Irving A. Maas had doubled in, along with his headoffice v.p. duties and supervision of Australia and the Far East. Hochstetter is located in Tokyo.

News Item No. 4 could well be the fact that Japan became the first film producing country in terms of volume, toting up 422 features, against last year's 367. (See other statistics at end of this article.)

IMPORTS

Importer-distributors faced about the same quota situation as the year before, except that the budget was trimmed down to $4.35 million, about 20 per cent less than '54. A basic total of 164 licenses was provided, with six more for "superior" pictures and 10 as bonuses to encourage export of Japanese product. At year-end, five of the latter had been issued to the following companies (title of picture and origin in parentheses): Toho ("Victimas de Pecado," Mexico); Sochiku ("Romeo and Juliet," ballet film, USSR); Dokuritsu ("Life in the Arctic," propaganda featurette, USSR); Toei ("Raices," Mexico); and Shintoho ("Muerte de un Cislista," Spain).

Quota allocations were again made by currency area and company.

Dollar area had a total of 124, of which U. S. majors had 104 and indies 20. Sterling area had 16 and Open Account 27. Above figures include the three "superior" picture licenses. Paramount and WB each claimed one for the dollar area and Union Eiga one for the open account.

Breakdown of quota in dollar area: AA, three; Columbia, nine; MGM, 16; Paramount, 16 and one bonus; Republic, six; RKO, 10; Fox, 13; UA, five; UI, 10; WB, 14 and one bonus; Breakston, two; Daiei, six; Eihai, four; Toho, two; Shintoho, one; Shochiku, two; Select, two, and Union Eiga, one.

Sterling: BCFC, nine; Towa Eiga, six, and Union Eiga, one.

Open: Hansen and Bernstein, one; Eihai, two; Gaikoku Eiga, one; General Film, two; Hokuo Eiga, one; Italifilm, five; Shingaiei, three; Taisei Eiga, two; Toho, one; Towa Eiga, six, and Union Eiga, two and 1 bonus.

All figures were not in at this writing, so an official total for revenue on imports can not be given. However, Eiren (Motion Picture Association of Japan) estimates it will be 10.35 yen billion (roughtly $28.7 million), while the Finance Ministry has been quoted as figuring on around 11.2 yen billion. The truth will probably lie within those two estimates. While U. S. majors' income was only slightly up (see above), French and Italian product has had a much better year and Disney's "Living Desert" (imported by Daiei of Japan) will help swell the indie import total. The Finance Ministry supports the larger estimate, saying that flat buys will total some 700 million yen more this year than last, when such income ran about 1 billion yen.

Unofficial returns for the American majors totaled 7,666,002,445 yen and put Paramount in the lead with 1,301,058,158 yen, 20th-Fox second with 1,251,953,477 yen, Metro third with 1,172,456,676 yen and the others in order: WB, 1,115,598,369 yen; Columbia, 691,141,244 yen; RKO, 635,893,925 yen; U-I, 623,104,820 yen; UA, 485,609,039 yen; Republic, 247,330,672 yen, and AA, 141,856,065 yen.

Included in WB's total is some 15 million yen earned by Republic for a partnership-license; and conversely, WB's total does not reflect its total earnings from a similar deal with indie Breakston.

A ruling by the Finance Ministry last July 1, which limited prints to 12 for each feature import, is claimed to have cut down distribution revenue during the last half of the year. Plans to expand color laboratories in '56 may ease this problem. B&W prints are normally made here, so do not pose a problem.

Only 27 of the 167 foreign features (164 by quota and three by 'Superior' picture licenses) remained to be played off in the last quarter of fiscal '55. The 10 U. S. majors had 17 to go, indies two, sterling area importers seven and open account one.

Foreign feature releases totaled 195, with the U. S. having 134, France 23, Great Britain 18, Italy nine and seven other countries 11. These included re-issues.

Paucity of foreign exchange cut down the remittance rate during the year, and reflected the lowered budget. Dollar account area took the brunt of the decrease, with most major companies able to remit only 14 per cent (when producer's share is over 60 per cent. The rate is 19 per cent when p.s. is 60 per cent and under. This category started out at an 18.3 per cent provisional rate, but the 14 per cent rate was made retroactive to April 1, when dollars got scarcer. Sterling remittances were finally pegged at 20 per cent (p.s. over 60 per cent; 25 per cent (p.s. 60 per cent and under). Open rates were the same as dollar.

DOMESTIC MARKET

The barometer of the motion picture business—the box office—showed a jump this calendar year to roughly the yen equivalent of $153 million, up from 1954's $135 million, according to best estimates.

Attendance increased to 877 million from 840 million. Theaters went up from 4,300 to 4,980, with 4,110 being permanent installations, the remainder seasonal and/or occasionals.

The Motion Picture Association of Japan estimated that total distribution revenue would hit 33.33 billion yen ($92.5 million), with domestics getting 22.98 billion yen ($63.833 million) and imports 10.35 billion yen ($28.7 million), latter about the same as last year. Finance Ministry estimates put the latter figure over 11 billion yen.

Japan imported 7.785 million feet of raw stock, more than half of which was Eastman Color, produced domestically nearly 290 million feet.

Exports jumped from last year's 672 to 952, including in both years "fringe" franchises of foreign product, which Japanese firms export to area countries, such as Okinawa and Taiwan.

America, including Hawaii, again proved to be a good market for Nippon pictures, taking 275.

Total receipts for Japanese exports are expected to hit over a million and a half dollars, compared with last year's million.

Eiren estimates domestic product distribution income will hit 22.98 billion yen ($63.833 million), a big jump from 1954's 18.86 billion yen ($52.4 million).

The commie-line companies generally were bad off financially, and their product took the soft approach—the rich are no good and the poor are wonderful. The gentle wheezes from Geneva reached Japan and caused a reaction like a mild Chinook wind blowing in from the Rockies over Western Canada.

FUTURES

The big question at this season is what the new year will reveal. Naturally, there's always much speculation about the next fiscal policy for imports. One fairly reliable source supports the contention that the budget for foreign films will be doubled from the present $4.35 million. This seems too optimistic, unless Japan's foreign exchange coffers fare much better than they did last year. It's this writer's belief that, if the budget is upped, the bulk of the increase will go into remittances rather than creating higher quota levels. An increase may also favor flat buys, which have been more in evidence in '55 than ever before.

Last April, the Finance Ministry stated that 1956-57 quota-allocations would be based on the allocations for the three previous fiscal years and distribution income during calendar '54 and '55.

Japan is in the throes of extensive theater-building plans. Shochiku intends to double its present seven roadshow houses in key cities. Toho and Toei are also putting up a number of deluxe theaters. Of course, this move will favor higher box office figures for '56.

The new year will doubtless see all foreign pictures made subject to a form of censorship. Previously, the American majors have not held still for such review of their product, but a realistic plan has been formulated by Eiren that will probably meet agreement on all sides.

A film council within the Cabinet, and having leading industry figures as members, along with representatives of the press, civic bodies and professional culture groups, has been formed during the past year and operates under a broad canopy of policy-forming directives. Its strength has not yet been fully felt, but it may be assumed that its functions will prove to be two-fold: 1) To act as a buffer between the industry and public opinion; and 2) To lay down long-range policy objectives in the national interest.

The advisory group on imports, which is composed of government and industry personnel, continues to act successfully as a check-balance body in deliberations with the Finance Ministry.

Domestic films and motion picture equipment appear destined to make further inroads into foreign markets. With Daiei's "Gate of Hell" winning Academy Awards as the best import to the U. S. and best costume design in color, the interest in Japanese product was further enhanced. Homel Pictures of the U. S., with a screen assist from William Holden, has also aided the cause of Nippon product with its well-ballyed openings of Toho's "Samurai" in America, and promises to do more with local studio offerings.

It may be expected that Shochiku will start grooming several pictures for export. President Shiro Kido's first global has resulted in this mammoth organization parleying its best talent into a coordinated effort to create product for overseas screens.

A major drawback that Japanese product is experiencing abroad is the lack of institutional publicity. Mostly, this is due to the fact that such promotion is not needed at home, where better than an average of eight features a week comes off the assembly line already booked, and thus the playdate campaign is the sum total of promotional effort. This means that the Japanese haven't had to use the techniques of institutional selling at home, nor do they yet realize that they have more than a picture to sell when they offer a Japanese film to foreign markets.

They have a country and a culture to sell, which are strange to Western eyes and ears. That's why the long-range institutional campaign is necessary, to gain industry and audience acceptance (not just curiosity) via trade and fan media.

THE GERMAN SCENE

By GUSTAV GENSCHOW

Staff Correspondent, THE FILM DAILY

BONN

THE GERMAN post-war motion picture boom is nearing its peak and there are hints that in 1956 the tide will turn again. In 1955 box office grosses reached a new record high of an estimated $162,000,000. The American share in the total may have reached a sum of more than $45,000,000. The American earnings at the distribution level, judging after 1954 figures and taking the general upward trend and the favorable impact of new-process product from Hollywood into account, may have exceeded the $18,000,000 mark.

A very large share out of the estimated $18 million, however, has been spent by American distributors in Germany for dubbing original versions into the German language, for relatively high publicity costs and various other distribution costs items. In fact, according to figures released by the MPEA branch in Germany, American companies spent a total of more than $23.5 million over a period of four years in Geramany itself and out of their German grosses.

The Hollywood share in the total West German screen time has kept a level of slightly more than 30 per cent and is most likely to stay there even in the light of an increase of the domestic German share in the total playing time.

TAXES

During 1955 there were few changes noted in the German tax scene. The average entertainment tax rate—which is collected on a local rather than on a national basis—is around 20 per cent, the maximum being about 30 per cent, the minimum in very few areas at 15 per cent. Theater owners' organizations during the past months have staged a number of tax campaigns without much success, and the aim—to get tax rates decreased to the pre-war level of a low 7.5 per cent—is as far off as it has ever been.

GENSCHOW

There are no special taxes for foreign pictures in effect. Foreign companies operating in Germany are subject to normal tax rates. The total entertainment tax take during the first half of 1955 was $16.6 million representing an increase of only 3.3 per cent against the previous year. The fact that the tax take increase is lower than the increase in attendance figures is mainly credited to the fact that more pictures are now receiving the "Valuable" label which means lower taxes in certain areas.

CENSORSHIP

The Freiwillige Selbstkontrolle (Voluntary Control Board) of the German film industry, the only official censoring body in West Germany, functioned without major accident during the 12 months. There was no bias against foreign product noted in the FSK ratings though a number of pressure groups repeatedly tried to make the board adopt a tougher policy towards American pictures.

Filmbewertungsstelle Deutscher Laender, another censorship body, on the other hand during the year repeatedly was under heavy fire from the side of the industry as well as from the side of the audiences and the Government. FBL board is made up by delegates from West German federal states and its ratings "Valuable" and "Extremely Valuable" mean lower taxes in some German areas.

Hollywood pictures, up to now, got 40 FBL awards for feature films and 140 awards for "cultural" films, short product and feature-length documentaries. The German Protestant reviewing Board has chosen a total of 19 American feature films "Best Picture of the Month" and the German Catholic Film Commission has, up to now, recommended a total 40 per cent of all Hollywood pictures exported to Germany.

THE NEW PROCESSES

Nineteen Fifty-five was a year of full success for CinemaScope in Germany. At the start of 1956 almost 2,000 German houses are equipped for CinemaScope projection. Almost 700 have full magnetic streophonic sound. There is no town of more than 50,000 population not having at least one CinemaScope-equipped theater. The rest of the German theaters are adopting CinemaScope at a very fast pace mainly due to the traditionally high quality of anamorphic systems made in Germany by such manufacturers as Zeiss, Möller and ISCO.

Almost all of the pictures in the new processes, CinemaScope, VistaVision and SuperScope are now supplied by American companies. This is an important factor which should result in higher grosses for American pictures in Germany and in a larger share in the total screen time.

THEATERS

At the start of 1956 there were almost 6,000 motion picture theaters in operation in West Germany, representing a total seating capacity of almost 2.5 million. The average seating capacity per theater is now at 411. There are only 14 houses of more than 1,500 seats. Plans for the construction of drive-ins have been announced but none was actually in existence at the start of 1956. The number of portable operations is given with 330. They play in 3,500 small communities.

Number of seats per head of population has reached a new all-time high of more than 43 per 1,000—against 26.8 seats per 1,000 in 1936. The construction boom which resulted in almost 4,500 new houses that have been built in the last decade—most of them reconstructed bombed-out houses—is now leveling off. In 1955 almost four new theaters were announced each week. In 1956 the pace is likely to slow down to three or even two new houses per week.

An outstanding foreign picture released in Germany in a German-language version may now be able to play in an average 1,000 situations. A domestic production often reaches twice that number of houses. A most important factor in theater grosses is film and slide advertising in Germany which accounts now for more than $15 million annually. There were no official data available on motion picture attendance in 1955 but an estimate of 780 admissions may come close to the actual figure. German theater owners feel that the present level of moviegoing is far from the natural ceiling. Statistically, 29 per cent of the population never go to the movies in Germany; 11 per cent is credited to the group buying more than one ticket per week; 14 per cent buy two or three tickets per month and the large group of 46 per cent attends a movie once every month or less often.

TELEVISION

At the start of 1956, 300,000 TV sets were in operation in West Germany. The average evening audience at the time was 1.2 million. Observers believe that the number of sets is to rise to a total of two million by the end of 1956 thus pushing the average evening audience to four million people who will be lost for the motion pictures. A recent survey indicated that 50 per cent of the total TV audience in Germany believes "TV is a full substitute for the movies." The impact of TV at the box office might be felt even harder if and when commercial TV enters the scene. There are some hints that a commercial television system similar to that of the ITA in Britain may be introduced during 1956.

EAST ZONE

The Soviet Zone of Germany, now having the status of a separate country, has few connections with the West. There are about 1,600 normal motion picture houses in operation plus an additional 4,000 portable operations and theaters located in factories and plants not accessible to the general public.

There are now annually slightly less than 100 feature films being released in East Germany, many of them being imported from Eastern countries and only few of them coming from West Germany or other European countries. There are no precise data on motion picture attendance available.

Production activities in Eastern Germany are concentrated up on DEFA, distribution is done by Progress Film. Previous attempts to arrange for co-productions with companies from West Germany failed due to a variety of reasons. There are practically no CinemaScope or similar process situations yet but there are some plans to introduce one or the anamorphic process on the production side as well as on the exhibition side.

EXPORTS

West German motion picture exports in 1955 grossed a total of $3,570,000 which represents an increase of 33 per cent against 1954 grosses. German producers, the industry's organizations as well as the Bonn Government are determined to start an all-out invasion of foreign markets in 1956.

Export Union, export promotional organization of the German motion picture industry, is setting up a number of branch offices in foreign countries and is adding correspondents in other areas. German exporters by now sell about 50 per cent of the total German feature film output in foreign countries, mainly in Austria, France and other Continental areas.

There are plans to expand activities to the U. S. and other overseas countries. Bonn parliamentary circles are discussing plans for a $2 million export campaign in both of the Americas; producers are discussing launching a Broadway "showcase" theater for German product and the Bonn Government is contemplating export subsidies to be granted in 1956.

SUBSIDIES

In 1955 the tax-financed West German motion picture subsidy plan was terminated without advance warning. The move confronted the German film industry for the bare facts of free enterprise and competition in more than 20 years for the first time. As sometime during the past years the German film industry was subsidized at up to 60 per cent of its total output and as there are only five or so distributors who never operated with subsidy money some observers see 1956 as a year of much threat to smaller companies. Actually the average German feature film earns less than 70 to 80 per cent of its production outlay in the domestic market. If it does not sell well in foreign markets as is the case with much of the smaller companies' product—it must necessarily drive a smaller German company out of business if there is no subsidy money—which actually is no longer there in 1956.

As some mild form of a substitute for the terminated subsidies the West German Government has set aside a total of nearly $510,000 annually in awards for "good" films. There are other plans to reintroduce subsidies in other forms but there seems to be little chance that such plans would actually become a reality in 1956.

RESTRICTIONS

In 1955 the Bonn Government asked the American Government to agree on a removal of a clause in the GATT pact that has made the introduction of a practicable quota system in Germany impossible. The cited GATT clause provides for a maximum of 27 per cent for any future German screen time quota for domestic product. As this report is written the negotiations have not been terminated but it is likely that the U. S. delegates finally agreed that the 27 per cent quota ceiling should be removed and that the German delegates agreed that the status quo for American pictures—no restrictions—should not be touched within the next two years.

This seems to give the American companies operating in Germany a chance to develop their present share in the market and keep it. If the Bonn Government should decide to introduce a quota or new taxes or transfer restrictions after the two years it would be an open question whether such measures should have any actual positive effects upon the German domestic play-off which even now has captured more than 50 per cent of the total screen time—a percentage which is high above the European average and which—as the Germans have pointed to frequently—has been achieved without restrictions for foreign product.

CIRCUITS

At the start of 1956 there was only one major theater circuit in Germany, the Ufa circuit. Shortly before the end of 1955 it was divorced from the Ufa parent company under the decartelization laws in West Germany which resemble the American anti-trust laws and which in other parts of the German economy have had less drastic effects. The Ufa circuit is now capitalized at $1.9 million; it has an average annual gross of $4.5 million; operates five fully owned houses, 27 theaters in leased buildings, nine partly-owned houses, five of other status. More are under construction or are being acquired.

M-G-M reportedly is planning to set up a theater circuit of its own in Germany starting in 1956. As this is written it seems certain that the company will construct at least two large houses in Berlin and in Cologne. But it is an open question if the company plans to expand the pair into a full-scale circuit.

UFA PROBLEM

Other Ufa companies, the Bavaria Studios at Munich-Geiselgasteig, a studio lot and laboratories in Berlin and in Wiesbaden, are like the Ufa theater circuit under Government administration as they represent the former German film monopoly which must be dissolved under rigid anti-trust laws. At the start of 1956 none of the Ufa properties had been sold to private bidders though there were negotiations with a variety of interests. It is most likely that the Ufa problem which is affecting all of the German motion picture industry finally will be solved in 1956.

Bavaria Studios, one of the UFA subsidiaries, which is up for sale at an estimated $5 million is the largest German studio lot having eight sound stages ranging from 3,200 square feet to 10,500 square feet. Height of the largest is 47 feet. Open air grounds at the lot are over four million square feet. Annual feature film capacity is 30 to 35.

PRODUCTION

One hundred and sixty German feature films are being offered to German theater owners for the 1955-1956 season. This is an all-time record even taking some 30 into account which may not be completed in time to be ready for distribution by mid-1956. In 1955 more than 40 per cent of the German feature films came in color—almost all of them in Agfacolor and in Eastmancolor. The color percentage is most likely to increase in 1956.

The average German feature film now costs $204,000 in production outlay which is more than 200 per cent of the 1936 level. Costs are expected to increase even more when the new processes are used by German producers. In 1955 there were almost no German pictures in any of the anamorphic processes available and the number is most likely not to increase beyond the 10 per cent mark of the total feature film output in 1956.

Average total annual earnings of German film producers were given in 1955 with $20 million though the average loss of a German feature film in the domestic market during the subsidy era was given with 20 to 25 per cent. It is estimated that slightly more than 20 per cent of the average feature film grosses come from exports and it is now generally taken for granted that any profits for the producer is coming from exports not from play-off in the domestic German market.

DISTRIBUTION

Total distribution grosses in 1955 are estimated at $65 million. More than 54 per cent out of the total must be credited to German pictures. American distributors in Germany are by far leading the list of foreign companies operating in Germany—they took about 70 per cent of foreign distributors' grosses in Germany. The French share is 14 per cent—West Germany is the largest buyer of French product—while British distributors took eight per cent.

Some foreign distributors in Germany during the past months started production of German films. Columbia Pictures' German branch now has an annual schedule of six German features especially made for exploitation by Columbia in Germany. Rank, RKO Radio and London Films are some more distributors having German product among the American and British films sold in Germany.

Distribution companies in Germany are offering for 1955-1956 exhibition a total of 520 feature films, the total breaking up as follows: 160 German films, 220 Hollywood films, 41 from France, 28 from Italy, 19 from Austria, 23 from Britain, 3 from Sweden, 26 from other countries.

The average rental rate in Germany is still 43 per cent but there is a definite upward trend. Recent maneuvering to increase the rental to 45 per cent met fierce resistance from exhibitors but it is unlikely that the 43 per cent average will be left for the year to come. There are few rental contracts which provide for flat rentals or for long-run guarantees.

OUTLOOK

Prospects for 1956 and for early 1957 are that American as well as German pictures will increase their share in the market and that product from other countries will find playdates harder to get. Hollywood's anamorphic pictures are going to be the major sales force in the American bid for the German audiences' time and money. Subsidy-used-to smaller German companies are expected to close down for good during 1956. Restrictions for American pictures are looming but they are now unlikely to come into effect before 1958.

THE ITALIAN FILM IN 1955

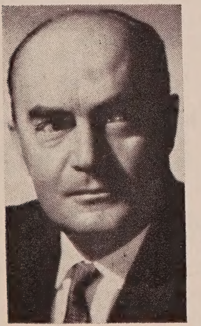
By EITEL MONACO

President, Associazione Nazionale Industrie Cinematografiche

ROME

IN THE YEAR 1955, Italian production of feature films was characterized by the introduction, on a large scale, of new technical discoveries in the field of wide screen and stereophonic sound. In fact, 30 per cent of the films produced in Italy were made according to these procedures.

The introduction of new technical systems and the subsequent increase in costs, resulted in, even with the same total amount of investments, a smaller number of films produced during the year—namely 135 against 157 films produced in 1954.



MONACO

In general it can be said that in 1955 the Italian film industry consolidated the position it had attained in the preceding years and that has resulted in its winning first place in the European film industry and second place in the world.

This situation was determined, in the past several years, by expanded markets for Italian films, in Italy as well as abroad, and the subsequent equalization of Italian production to such market needs, at the numerical as well as the qualitative point of view.

The development of the movie market for Italian films was as follows:

(a) THE DOMESTIC MARKET: The Italian film, which in 1948 obtained 13 percent of the total market receipts, has now reached the level of 36.2 percent with almost 23.8 percent of the number of films presented on the market. The Italian market passed from 579 million viewers in 1948 to 800 million in 1954 and receipts increased from 41.9 billion lire ($70 million) to 105 billion lire ($170 million). For 1955, although final figures are not available, one can estimate that figures referring to tickets sold as well as figures referring to total gross receipts have increased from five to 10 per cent above 1954.

Parallel to this market development, there has also been an adequate and simultaneous increase in the number of theaters which reached, according to a recent survey, 14,500, including seasonal theaters, drive-ins and those operating on sub-standard gauges. As to Italian theaters equipped for CinemaScope, the present number is 1,158.

(b) THE FOREIGN MARKET: In the past few years Italian films have attained ever-increasing success in all the markets of the world. From 807 prints exported to 38 countries in 1948, the number has increased to 2,139 prints exported to 86 countries in 1954. In these last years, that is, from 1950 to 1954, profits from the export of Italian films increased from $1.5 million to over $11 million.

Simultaneously, in film production, the Italian industry, enlarging and strengthening its studios and installing up to date equipment, has raised its annual production to 135 pictures, facing and solving, as they came along, problems deriving from the introduction, first of color, then of wide screen and then of stereophonic sound.

Production costs increased because of technical innovations and, above all, because of the adoption of a type of film which could withstand competition of other pictures on the domestic as well as the foreign markets, i.e., with production programs of wider spectacular scope.

In 1955 the average cost of production was 170 million lire ($280,000).

The problems which presently face Italian production may be summarized as (a) legislative problems and (b) industrial problems.

The legislative problems derive from the necessity of Government intervention in favor of national film production. As is known, in Italy (not as in the case of the United States where the entertainment taxes have been reduced or abolished), the State levies a very high tax percentage on the price of movie tickets. This results in the necessity of, for Italian films, the Government intervening with measures apt to “compensate” said fiscal pressure, and make it worthwhile for the domestic industry to produce films.

This entire subject is currently being studied by Parliament and the Italian movie industry plans to begin 1956 with stability and tranquillity with regard to this problem.

The industrial problems principally relate to the action, already undertaken, for a higher industrial qualification of the producing firms which would permit facing problems relating to production costs and to commercial organization for the exploitation of Italian films on the national and foreign markets.

———o———

In the international field the Italian movie industry has continued its policy of collaboration with the foreign movie industry, a policy which wass begun in 1949 and has steadily developed.

The concepts of the Italian film industry's policy in the international field were:

In the exchange field: to establish quotas in the inter-change with various countries, on the basis of monetary agreements; this in order to permit a recovery of the Italian film market which had been “inflated” during the first years following the war, as well as to obtain conditions of reciprocity with the numerous countries which limit the distribution of our films.

In the co-production field: To assure the films made in co-production a greater exploitation than that possible for the purely Italian film on European film markets, markets which are subject to excessive fiscal burdens.

In 1955 the Italian film industry renewed its co-production and exchange agreements with France, Germany and Spain. The co-production agreements also covered the possibility of producing films in triple co-production and ample facilities were provided to facilitate a greater production of films suitable for young people.

Lastly, after much negotiating, the agreement between ANICA and MPAA was recently renewed. In this connection I would like to underline that this agreement constitutes the most evident demonstration of the concrete results which the policy of international collaboration can bring about to the film industries of the world.

We now await the enactment of the new Italian law for the Italian movie industry to give effect to the new agreements.

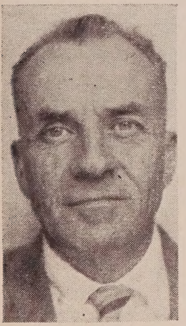
A YEAR OF REGULARITY

By P. A. HARLE

President-Director General, La Cinematographie Francaise

PARIS

FOR THE FRENCH INDUSTRY, the year 1955 was one of remarkable regularity; of precipitate developments, there was none.



HARLE

The general trade receipts continued too low, in comparison with the French industry's brilliant Continental competitors, Italy and Germany. However, as a result of a rise in salaries and price stability, the purchasing power of moviegoers is increasing.

The impact of the arrival of TV, here a Government service, is felt stronger in the Northern zone than in the regions of Paris, Lyons or Marseilles.

The use of color and wide-screen processes is increasing. All major theaters have enlarged their screens. The Saint-Maurice Technicolor Laboratories, near Paris, have started functioning. The special raw-stock is supplied by Kodak-Pathe (Vincennes, Seine).

The "Development Fund" (formerly Fonds d'Aide (Financing Aid), created in 1948) was completed in 1955. It now draws more than five billion francs yearly from theater receipts and the release of new films, and splits it among producers of French films, theatre exhibitors, film studios and labs, newsreels, publicity services, etc. In other words, blood is drawn from the heart and shot back into the head, legs and arms, with the addition of a microbe, "Dirigismus multiformis."

Production in 1955 presented this statistical picture:

76 100 percent French films at an average cost of 75 million francs.

34 co-production films at an average cost of 185 million francs.

Total: 110 films representing an investment of 12 billion francs.

Of the above 110 films, 35 are in color and 17 are in wide screen processes.

The number of national productions was larger than in 1954. The average cost, however, has decreased from 115 millions in 1954 to 109 millions in 1955.

The number of co-productions with other countries, which represented 50 percent in 1954, declined to 30 percent in 1955.

There were 5,690 theaters in operation in Metropolitan France in 1955. They sold 390 million admissions during the year for 49 billion francs in gross receipts, the average price per seat was 123 francs.

THEATERS.

There are 42,783,000 inhabitants in Metropolitan France.

In comparison with 1954 (383 million moviegoers and 45.5 billion), there is a slight increase in revenues.

DISTRIBUTION.

A total of 356 new films was placed on the French market in 1955 as against 384 in 1954. There were fewer films released in the original version only: 56 in 1955, against 104 in 1954.

Of the 300 films in general release (made in French or dubbed in French), 54 films were for "large screen"; of these 45 were American and nine European.

Of these 300 films, 138 were in color and of the following origin: 94 American, 26 French, 10 British and 8 Italian. The color average for 1955 is 46 percent.

The average rental basis was 43 per cent. Eighty big films had special authorization for rentals higher than the normal rates.

EQUIPMENT.

In the manufacture of raw stock Kodak-Pathe (Vincennes) is still dominant. Gevaert (Belgium), Ferrania (Italy), Agfa (Germany) supply the color film for their processes.

Technicolor-France began to supply prints in that process in October.

Almost all the projection and sound equipment is French-made. The Debrie and Eclair cameras are used almost exclusively for filming, as well as the studio equipment. The development vats and Debrie automatic printers are world renowned.

FILM EXPORTS.

The approximate foreign receipts of French production for 1955 are as follows:

	francs
French Union	500 million
Western Europe	1,600 “
Eastern Europe	150 “
North America	180 “
South America	250 “
Near East	40 “
Far East	80 “
Total	2,800 million

The 10 best foreign customers are:

BIGGEST YEAR DOWN UNDER

By PETER MORRISON

SYDNEY

INDUSTRY LEADERS agree that 1955 has been the biggest year in the history of the motion picture business Down Under, in point of both gross receipts and attendance. This they state confidently, even though no aggregate figures are available, and have not been available since, in October, 1953, the Commonwealth Government eliminated its uniform Federal entertainment tax, in respect of which both taxes payable and the numbers of taxable admissions were published regularly.

MORRISON

Any box office figures for the past 12 months must therefore be conjecture. But reliable estimates place the increase at about 10 per cent, which would bring the national attendance tally to somewhere around 170,000,000—believed to be the highest in the world, on a per capita basis. (The Australian population stood at 9,090,738 at the latest census, Dec. 31, 1954.)

Reasons for the 1955 increase in business are clear. The population of the country is increasing rapidly, and more than 1,000,000 migrants have settled here since the end of World War II. This influx alone has boosted the population by over one-eighth. At the same time, Australia during 1955 has enjoyed a high level of internal prosperity, even though the overseas trade balance has been adverse. There's full employment, wages are high and the financial trend has continued towards inflation. Too, the people have been in a contented frame of mind, evidently feeling secure in the Robert Gordon Menzies Government, which they're just returned once more at the Federal polls, and in the economic status quo. On the whole, there's not been much industrial unrest, and the public has been in a spending mood, with money in their pockets to spend.

The 1955 increase in box office pace has been related, also to the improved quality of pictures, coupled with the dramtic success of the new screen media in this territory. As the year draws to a close, some 700 Aussie theaters have either converted to CinemaScope presentation or have placed firm orders for anamorphic equipment. This is nearly half the total number of situations in the country, and includes almost all key, top-grossing theaters. There's ample proof that the public, as well as the exhibition side of the business, has responded in striking fashion.

Although again there are no accurate figures available, it could be said that virtually all Australian theaters have installed or are planning to install some form of wide screen presentation.

While attendance figures for 1955 are rated above 1954, grosses would be even further ahead of last year's, since admission prices have generally been increased, to some small extent.

Placing Australia in the world market, without knowledge of exact receipts, is impossible; but this country is rated one of the most important territories for British product, and authoritative estimates rank Australia as grossing around 12 per cent of the foreign business turned in by pictures from the American majors.

CENSORSHIP

There has been no change in Censorship regulations or procedures during the year, and the Commonwealth Government's appointed authorities continue with their policy of "viewing every foot of every film" entering Australia. Local producers are not actually obliged to submit their films for censorship, but wisely they do so. The industry enjoys a particularly cordial relationship with the Chief Censor and his staff, who are regarded as circumspect, but on the whole liberal in their ratings.

The censors object mainly to excessive violence or sex (unless this is tastefully or "artistically" done, as in many Continental films which have been passed for exhibition here). The censors take objection to footage which excessively transgresses the Australian sense of good taste or the Australian mores, and sequences that are offensive to religious sects or to nations with which this country enjoys amicable relations, are liable to cuts. But it's generally sex and violence in pictures intended for exhibition before the mass public, that are most often eliminated.

During 1954 (latest period for which figures are available) only one 35 mm. feature film was rejected by the censors, and one was first rejected then passed on reconstruction; 69.33 per cent of the films submitted were passed without eliminations, while 30.42 per cent were cut in some way.

FUTURE PROSPECTS

Industry leaders are confident 1956 will exceed even 1955's record trade, since they anticipate a continuance of our internal prosperity, plus a steady increase in population (mainly via immigration) and a flow of box office product from America and Britain, the two countries that matter most to the industry here.

They see problems ahead, however. Due to the nation's unfavorable overseas trade balance, there are almost sure to be further import and other trade restrictions, with no easing of the dollar remittances position. At home, trade toppers foresee tighter curbs on company operation and in particular on the hire-purchase outfits.

Too, there's the ever-present problem of rising costs. The inflationary trend means higher and higher wages and other basic costs for theatermen and distributors alike. The distributors have a special problem—print costs. With the constantly rising percentage of color pictures coming out of Hollywood and Britain, this angle is becoming progressively more burdensome.

No color features are printed here, and, added to the freight costs and higher basic purchase prices of the tinters, are onerous import duties. In all, prints for a single color feature can run as high as $13,000, which can be as much as half the remittable earnings of the picture.

Costs of advertising and publicity, too, are continually rising.

Then there's the threat of TV, which is due to start on a Governmental and on a commercial basis around November of 1956—maybe a little later. Undoubtedly the initial six TV stations—three in Sydney and three in Melbourne—will hit the box office to some extent; but trade leaders are not greatly concerned. Their view is that it will take time for TV sets to reach an appreciable number, and that the standard of programs will not be comparable to movie entertainment. They view local talent as inadequate to provide a continuity of topline live-artist of film shows, while import restrictions, on a drastic basis and covering both dollar and soft-currency areas, will limit the use of overseas material.

Biggest single competition to movies in 1956 will probably be the 1956 Olympic Games, to be held in Melbourne in November. That is, provided the Games are telecast as planned. Olympic authorities are presently mulling offers for TV and film rights, which may well go to an overseas outfit. The Australian Broadcasting Commission (Government radio and TV) is however going ahead with elaborate plans to cover the Games with direct daytime coverage and nighttime repeats, on both radio and video.

THEATERS

Number of 35 mm. theaters operating in Australia—giving the greatest per capita coverage in the world—is 1,735, including 10 drive-ins. Additionally, there are 40 touring 35 mm. circuits and 107 fixed 16 mm. commercial theaters, plus 19 16 mm. touring shows.

The number of 35 mm. theaters increased by only half-a-dozen in 12 months, but the actual number of shows built, including drive-ins, would be somewhat higher. A handful of "borderline" theaters—mainly in low-grossing suburbs and country situations—bowed out, and were replaced by new theaters, better situated and offering better amenities and presentation.

The total seating capacity of the 35 mm. theaters is just over 1,200,000 for a national population of 9,090,738. The capital city first-run theaters account for 101,922 seats.

Almost all Australian theaters operate on a double-feature policy, with one headliner and a support, or, more rarely, a double headliner. The intermissions, which applies even for single feature bills (when shorts are shown for the first half), occupies anything from seven to 15 minutes, and in this period theatermen conduct their highly valuable concession-vending business.

Slides and ad films are screened before the show and at intermission. In many theaters this constitutes a further valuable source of revenue. Programs run from around two-and-a half hours (city theaters) to three or three-and-a-half hours in the nabes.

Much of the nation's key playing time is cornered by the two major circuits, Hoyts Theaters, Ltd. and Greater Union Theaters Pty., Ltd. Hoyts, operating 177 situations, is controlled by 20th-Fox in America, while Greater Union is half-owned by the J. Arthur Rank Organization, and operates 130 houses.

Aside from the introduction of new techniques, both chains spent freely on general renovations to raise the already admirable standard of operation and housekeeping that applies in most of Australia's theaters. Greater Union in particular allocated hundreds of thousands of dollars to a rebuilding program encompassing its Sydney suburban group. Many of these houses, which had been somewhat down-at-the-heel when GU acquired them, have been given a facelift at cost far exceeding the original price of construction.

M-G-M has a chain of 12 theaters. This includes five nabes, though all are operated on first-run policy.

Exhibitors have found a new source of revenue in foreign-language films, which until recently had been confined to a few art houses. They are now being shown sporadically in theaters throughout the country. They've been accepted even by patrons in industrial areas and in the sticks.

Upbeat in this type of product is no doubt largely due to large numbers of Continental folk among immigrants, but Australian nationals, too, have developed a taste for the European pix, which are more often than not sexy in theme.

Hoyts has switched one of its Sydney city theaters to a Continental policy re-naming it the Paris Cinema (it was the Park); and Greater Union is operating a nabe on first-run foreign policy. Even M-G-M, which normally runs only its own product through its circuit, has screened a Festival of Foreign Films, and has booked foreign pictures for individual runs.

PRODUCTION

Numerically, Australian production, which is always in English language, is insignificant. During 1955, not one feature was actually produced and released. However, by paradox, the production industry here is undergoing its biggest ever upswing in point of world-rating box office features.

Nineteen fifty-five saw the release of Australia's first color fiction feature, "Jedda," which, in Gevacolor, is being handled here by Columbia. The film has scored record trade in each of its key releases, and in most nabe and sticks showings.

Too, 1955 saw the delayed release of a black-and-white feature made some years earlier. "Captain Thunderbolt" is a bushranger story of support feature rating, but in many situations grossing well as a top feature, on the local angle.

As this is written, British producer Anthony Kimmins is completing lens work on a London Film-20th-Fox feature, "Smiley," in CinemaScope and color. It stars world names, Sir Ralph Richardson and John McCallum, in addition to local players. Shooting has been carried out at Pagewood Studios, Sydney, and in the near-Sydney countryside.

Nineteen fifty-five saw launching of the first Australian-French co-production deal, with protagonists Chips Rafferty and Lee Robinson (prominent local production team) linked with Paul Decharme, of Paris. Their first film, "Walk Into Paradise" was lensed in New Guinea, in wide-screen and Eastman Color, starring Rafferty plus top French players Francoise Christophe and Pierre Cressoy. The film is in both English and French versions, and is forerunner of a two-yearly series, which will be made in the South Pacific area, using Sydney as headquarters. In addition to the co-pro schedule, Rafferty and Robinson will make a series of features on their own account.

A black-and-white quickie has just been completed—"Three Yarns"—a composite film with Australian stories linked by commentary from John McCallum. Local units are now jockeying for positions in the imminent TV field, which should provide a further fillip to the production industry.

Costs of production in Australia vary considerably, and with so few pictures made, it's not possible to strike a useful average figure. However, a new high will be reached next year when Columbia brings a Warwick Productions unit to Sydney to make "Wards of the Outer March," in CinemaScope and color. With Charles ("Jedda") Chauvel in the producer's chair, the film will cost $1,000,000.

EXHIBITION

All Australian theaters show imported films, which comprise almost the entire yearly fare. Only an occasional Australian film is shown, despite the Australian Quota Act, which ostensibly gives a measure of protection to local films. During 1955 only one Australian picture was registered under the Quota Act, three in 1954, one in 1953, none at all in 1952 and one in 1951, and 1950.

Some half-dozen theaters in the capital cities play almost exclusively Continental or other foreign-language films, and some few are all-British houses. But by and large, American pictures provide the bulk of Australian playing time. Twice as many U. S. pix are imported as British productions, which again double the tally of all films from other sources.

ENTERTAINMENT TAX

Ticket tax applies in only three Australian states—Victoria, West Australia and Tasmania and the average rate is around 22 per cent, but on a sliding scale, according to the admission price. The lowest price brackets are free of tax. Each of the three states has its own scale, and operates independently of the other states and of the Federal Government. The money collected is adding to general revenue of the state concerned and is not directly used in any way to assist the motion picture industry.

DISTRIBUTION

The American majors have a substantial amount of local currency frozen here, though the exact amount is not available for publication. It was minimized by MPEA president Eric Johnston on his Australian visit, and by Columbia International prexy Lacy W. Kastner, more recently. However, distributors here regard the frozen funds as a serious problem. Efforts are made to channel the funds through other soft-currency areas, for use in production, property purchase or indirect remission.

Some companies have used funds for Australian production, and M-G-M, only U. S. major directly operating its own theaters here, ploughs money back generously into existing Metro houses (renovations, new equipment, CinemaScope gear, etc.) or in purchase, occasionally, of additional houses. M-G-M however still has only 12 theaters, albeit they are the last word in modernity and in standards of presentation and patron comfort.

There is thus a limit to the extent to which the majors can overcome or bypass the remittance poser, which is likely to remain for some considerable time. Australia's overseas trade balance generally and dollar funds in particular do not have any immediately foreseeable solution, and the film companies are pegged, along with other industries.

On the credit side, it's notable that when recently the Menzies Government brought down further stringest import restrictions, the film trade was largely unaffected. There is actually no restriction on the number of pictures that can be imported, provided the importer has the necessary licenses. The real curb is on remittances.

Australia is largely an American market, with trade here dominated by the eight majors who are members of the local Motion Picture Distributors' Association. They are Columbia, M-G-M, Paramount, RKO, 20th-Fox, United Artists, Universal and Warners.

Twentieth-Fox in addition to its own product distributes for Republic, Associated British-Pathe and Lion International, each of which has its own representative, working in association with 20th.

Universal distributes for London Films, which also has its own head in Sydney. United Artists has during 1955 distributed a group of Allied Artists pix, and a deal is pending for a further group. AA had for some years prior to 1954 been without substantial representation on the screen here.

Notwithstanding the three groups of British product released via the American companies, Britain's major outlet here is through a subsidiary of Greater Union Theaters — British Empire Films — which handles primarily the Rank output. UK films have over the past year enjoyed striking success at the box office. The biggest of the British pix have rivalled anything from America, in first release houses. In some suburban and country areas the public shows some antipathy towards UK product, which however is protected tradewise through legislation. The standard film contract provides for rejection by the exhibitor of 25 per cent of American pictures, whereas there is no rejection right for British product. Exhibitors have repeatedly objected to this, but it's unlikely that the position will change.

A notable development in distribution during 1954 and 1955 has been the rise of the independents. The importers of foreign-language films have benefited from the strong upbeat in box office potential of this type of product, while two small-time companies are now rapidly growing and are turning more and more to English and American product. They are Ray Films and Independent Film Distributors Pty., Ltd. (British IFD no longer exists.) They have both received allocations to import films from dollar areas and to remit dollars to America, a benefit previously enjoyed only by the American distributors. Both Ray and IFD have exploited the so-called product shortage, which has meant, in reality, a temporary shortage of immediately available A features, and an overall shortage of supports.

These two indie companies now operate their own branches or have distribution arrangements with other independents in all the major Australian states, and they're for the first time winning a significant share of first-run city playing time. This is something new in distribution Down Under.

Included in the recent product deals clinched by the indies are these—Ray Films: Goldwyn re-issues and Associated Artists new releases and re-issues. IFD: "New Faces" (outside the Hoyts circuit), "Gate of Hell" (first Japanese film shown here, and a remarkable box office success in general release houses as well as art centers), "Ulysses" (a major success in its first Australian showing, jut ended) and "The Magnificent Matador."

IFD is closely associated with an entirely new distribution company just formed in Sydney. It is Astra Film Distributing Co. Pty. Ltd., 155 King Street. It plans to bring to Australia top European product, including the best of Lux product, plus some British features—mainly supports. IFD's managing director Errol Heath is on the board of the new outfit.

The trade here has been watching RKO closely since the decline under Howard Hughes and the subsequent purchase. Of special interest has been the extension of RKO's release agreement with Disney, whereby the distrib now handles a further batch of product in Australia, packaged into three unit programs—"20,000 Leagues," "Davy Crockett" and "Vanishing Prairie," are the headliners.

TELEVISION

The Australian Broadcasting Act has been amended to allow for the operation of telestations here, and following a Royal Commission inquiry into the ways and means of introducing the medium, it was decided that six stations should launch video—three in Sydney and three in Melbourne.

One of the Sydney stations and one in Melbourne will be operated by the non-profit Government broadcasting concern, the Australian Broadcasting Commission. Two commercial TV stations have been licensed for Sydney, and Paramount Pictures is interested financially in one company.

Two further licenses have been granted for Melbourne, and in one of these ventures, several film trade companies are linked. They are Hoyts Theaters (20th-Fox), Greater Union Theaters (Rank and local interests in partnership) and Cinesound Productions, a subsidiary of GU.

All six TV concerns have been moving towards November, 1956, as launching date, to coincide with the Melbourne Olympic Games. But it's considered extremely doubtful whether all will be ready for airings at that time.

DRIVE-INS

From its beginnings in Burwood (Melbourne suburb), in February of last year, the "drive-in fever" has swept Australia. After an incubation period (to watch the Burwood "pilot" venture), ozoners began springing up all around Melbourne. Today there are 10 in operation throughout Australia, with another to open before the year's end, and at least one more in January. Many drive-ins are being built, and the number planned for the immediate future runs into double figures .

Even in Tasmania, Australia's southermost and coldest state, plans are well advanced for a drive-in, which is to be as elaborate as any on the mainland. Drive-ins here are costing around $220,000, and two so far have CinemaScope equipment. Each ozoner boasts amenities along American lines—barbecues, playgrounds, sweets and milk bars, services ranging from hot-water bags in winter to warming baby's milk to the required temperature.

PROGRESS IN NEW ZEALAND

By PETER MORRISON

NEW ZEALAND

THAT ATTENDANCES and gross revenue in the current fiscal period (ending March 1956) will top even the 1954-55 record, is confidently predicted by New Zealand industry leaders—notably R. J. Kerridge, managing director of the vast Kerridge-Odeon circuit and distribution and supply companies. It's expected that the attendance tally will far exceed 46,000,000 in a country of only 2,118,435 population.

New Zealanders are thus among the most frequent movie-goers in the world. Reasons for the industry's prosperity in this country rest principally in the overall national buoyancy, with full employment and high wages, coupled with a cost of living and of business operation that's appreciably below that of, say, Australia, whose way of life in most respects closely approximates that of its neighbor. While the New Zealand public has ample spending money, there's comparatively little entertainment to spend it on, aside from motion pictures. Too, New Zealanders are shown the best of American, British and picked Continental product, presented in theaters that rate among the most comfortable and efficiently operated in any country, America included.

The virile showmanship of the two circuits which dominate New Zealand's picture business augments the box office pressure, and NZ trade toppers have repeatedly in the past 12 months declared the standard of screen fare coming forward from the major studios of the world is truly "better than ever." Most of the key New Zealand houses are geared for wide-screen and/or CinemaScope presentation, and the new media have been well received by the public.

New Zealand's censorship regulations have been unchanged during 1955, and relations between the censor's department and the industry remained on a cordial basis. The censor is liberal, by world standards, and, although many pictures are cut on the grounds of excessive violence, the trade Down Under was startled by the passing for general exhibition, of an all-nude film, "Garden of Eden," made in color for the American Sunbathing Association. Official view was that the film did not transgress good taste, and was wholesome entertainment. This is indicative of the latitude allowed under the NZ censorship.

New Zealand's recently published annual report of the Internal Affairs Department gives a comprehensive run-down on imports and censorship. The report states:

"The screen in New Zealand today has taken on an international aspect which is more pronounced than at any time since the silent era, when language constituted no barrier to free circulation of films between countries. In the past year (1954-55, the latest period for which figures are available), 95 new feature-length films from countries other than America and Britain were submitted and approved, as compared to 60 the previous year and only 12 in 1950."

(These figures in themselves may be misleading, for New Zealand remains primarily an American and British market, with key playing time and biggest coverage, plus biggest revenue, going to pictures from these two countries. New Zealand is one of the strongest territories in the world in point of public appreciation of British product.)

The report continues:

"As usual, many of these 'foreign' features were intended for limited audiences only, some being in 16 mm. size or without any form of English translation. On the other hand, an increasing number, 'dubbed' or sub-titled in English, have found their way into our ordinary commercial theaters," the report adds.

"The total American features registered this year was 280, as compared with 320 three years ago, and there has been an even sharper decrease in the number of shorts registered.

"The influence of television has also affected the variety and number of Hollywood screenplays, and a greater number of outdoor and 'costume' type features which lend themselves to spectacular treatment are now being produced.

"This trend is apparent from the fact that 90, or 32 per cent, of the 280 features registered during the year were of the Western type, as compared with 20 per cent in 1953 and 25 per cent in 1954."

Analyzing foreign imports, the report states:

"Countries of origin of new feature-length films other than American and British were: China, 24 (last year, 4); USSR, 14 (15); France, 11 (9); Italy, 12 (6); India, 13 (16); Poland, 5 (5); Czechoslovakia, 6 (2); Austria and Germany, 3 (1); Switzerland, 4 (0); Sweden, 3 (0).

"Six films were subject to outright refusal of certificates by the Censor—four feature length screenplays and a documentary feature from the USA, and a Polish 'war atrocity' short.

"Another American documentary feature was rejected unless substantially re-edited. Two of the above American screenplays ('I, the Jury' and 'Prisoner of War') were subsequently passed by the Cinematograph Appeal Board, with special certificates and after excisions.

"The Censor's rejection of the two other American screenplays ('The Wild One' and 'Wicked Woman') was upheld by the Board. Appeals were not lodged in respect of the three other rejected films.

"Considerable progress has been made in formulating an up-to-date and comprehensive set of new censorship regulations. Detailed work on the draft regulations has been proceeding and consideration has been given to a number of major issues of importance."

New Zealand has 540 35 mm. commercial theaters with a seating capacity of almost a quarter of a million (nearly one seat for every eight persons in the country). Additionally there are 96 16 mm. commercial situations, with a seating capacity of 11,500. These figures include itinerant shows.

Of the 540 35 mm. shows, 182 are operated by the major circuits and this covers most of the key situations. The Kerridge-Odeon chain, linked with the Rank Organization in Britain, has 121 theaters, and the 20th-Fox loop, Amalgamated Theaters, has 50.

Eight major American distributors operate in New Zealand, as does the Rank Organization's distribution company and London Films, plus a number of indie exchanges handling largely Continental product and indie production from the UK and America. Domestic production in New Zealand is confined to films of less than feature length and presently there are no co-pro deals in operation or pending.

Each year, New Zealand theaters absorb some 375 new features or freshly imported repeats. The industry is strictly "licensed," with Government regulations providing that exhibitors and distributors alike must hold permits issued by the Internal Affairs Department. There's a degree of protection for British or British Commonwealth productions, and exhibitors are required to screen not less than 20 per cent of these Quota pictures. Not only are motion pictures censored, but all publicity material supplied by the distributors to the theatermen are subject to scrutiny, and all newspaper advertising must show the type of certificate issued by the Censor in respect of the advertised films. The Censor has the authority to restrict exhibition of films by issuing certificates specifying the minimum age of persons to be admitted.

There are no import restrictions on films or publicity material and there's no Customs Duty payable on films imported. There is, however, a tax on film hire, which is intended to take the place of duty on film imports. Publicity material imports are subject to duty.

There is in effect no direct restriction on currency remittances, though remissions to hard currency areas are liable to periodic "review" by the Reserve Bank of New Zealand.

Admission charges are subject to control of the Price Tribunal, which until recently keep a stringent curb on increases. The advent of the new techniques, with added exhibitor expenditure, resulted in some rises, however, and it's expected there'll be other increases in the near future: The industry for many years was permitted only very slight adjustments, though an inflationary trend obtained in the country's general financial structure.

Single feature programs prevail in most theaters, and concession vending is a very important adjunct to the business. Foreign-language films have met with some little success, and it's not unusual—especially on the Kerridge-Odeon chain—for movie theaters to switch policies, billing legit stage shows, vaudeville, musical presentations and even circus. Showmanship in the Dominion retains the flexibility of the Barnum days. R. J. Kerridge, though his main source of revenue is from motion pictures, even plans flying an entire symphony orchestra from London for a snap tour of the country's key centers.

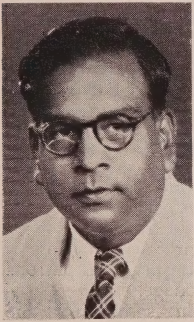
INDIA IN 1955

By S. S. PANI

Staff Correspondent, THE FILM DAILY

BOMBAY

GENERALLY SPEAKING, 1955 was in every way a decidedly better period for the Indian film industry than the previous year.



PANI

There was no appreciable increase in the number of pictures produced and the proportion of flops was greater, rising from 80 to 90 per cent. Nor was there an increase in the number of theaters. Also, much to the chagrin and increasing consternation of the Indian producer, there is a pronounced shift in audience-preference for the imported product. This trend is becoming more and more pronounced and leaders of the Indian industry are exercising all their ingenuity to devise measures to save the situation; little success has attended their efforts.

Withal, box office taking have shown an appreciable rise, variously reckoned at between 20 and 25 per cent for the Indian product. This is due to the general level of increase of prosperity in the country, an appreciable increase in the per capita income of the agriculturist and the worker, brought about by seasonal monsoon rainfall and addition to the wealth of the country, as results of the execution of the first Five-Year plan are becoming more and more evident.

True it is, targets set are still to be achieved and returns are markedly less than were hoped for; but still, there has been uniform improvement. It would be idle for the Indian producer to claim that his product has gained greater popularity on account of better quality. More people are able to afford going to pictures and more people are able to buy higher class admissions in the rural areas. There being no other form of entertainment available in vast areas of the country in the interior, with the exception of cities, Indian films enjoy some adventitious vogue.

In the cities and in such other places where there is an increase in purchasing power, audiences which would otherwise have not seen the important product have now started patronizing it. In these areas, while Indian films are estimated to have collected about 10 per cent more, the Hollywood product has benefited by something between 25 to 40 per cent.

What is of great interest, however, is the fact in these areas even those who do not know a word of English have started patronizing, enjoying and relishing the Hollywood product which is indication enough, and that deserves to be made note of, that if these pictures are made available to theaters in the interior they are bound to meet with the same welcome reception.

It was recently pointed out that there are more than 30 principal languages in this country and, broadly speaking, in the area where one language is prevalent, the others are as good as foreign languages which, however, is no bar to pictures in others (Indian) being screened in a large number of theaters. That a picture is in English is no handicap.

Increased patronage for the Hollywood product is principally due to the new processes, like CinemaScope and VistaVision. Attempts made by some so-called leaders of the Indian industry to pooh-pooh these have proved of little avail and the Indian producer now knows that his product collects much better and runs longer if exhibited in a theater with up-to-date equipment, to which could be attributed the clamour that Government does compel such theaters to allot a specified portion (10 days in the month) exclusively for Indian films.

There is no chance of India producing pictures in the new media and a question put by Spyros P. Skouras to the president of the Film Federation of India was side-tracked by him with the reply that he should consult the trade. There is also no chance of Indian theaters being improved. There is the token case of exhibitors in Bombay State protesting against Government proposals to afford elementary amenities to audiences, while Mysore Government had to warn exhibitors that every theater should have at least two water taps for supplying fresh drinking water.

It was only in November, 1955, that Prime Minister Nehru openly said there is no need for the construction of new theaters in this country, at least not in the present context, when every ounce of energy and every cent of money have to be conserved and devoted to nation-building activities. Again, sober estimates of potential money power for the execution of the second Five-Year Plan, estimated to cost $40 million, disclosed an appreciable shortfall in resources. There was hope till Dec. 4 that this could be met through foreign aid. On this day came an ominous statement from the Prime Minister in Parliament that, in view of what had happened just then, foreign aid could not be hoped for. This cryptic utterance cast a gloom all over the country. It is necessary to say all this proves that there is no near prospect of addition to theaters in India.

CENSORSHIP

Censorship has been further tightened. Until recently, all that was objected to in the India product was indecent costume, indecorous behavior, suggestive dialogue and emphasis on sex. There now is a rule that all censor certificates, including those for the imported product, will have to be renewed every five years commencing with pictures released in 1950, with the right vested in the censors to review the film concerned in the then existing context with power to ban or order further deletions. A few pictures have already been refused certificates at such reviews.

Censorship has become more practical and more realistic in regard to the Indian product and the censors refuse to countenance anything that is not true to life, save in fantasies and mythologicals. It is no longer possible for the Indian producer to ridicule law, justice and the learned professions.

A recent directive rules that there shall be no emphasis on the female breast and a woman cannot be photographed without her wearing an opaque garment over her choli (analogous to the blouse) . This has been the piece de resistance of the Indian producer to inveigle and titillate the adolescent and the juvenile.

Kissing and intimate physical contact between the two sexes have been forbidden. The Indian producer is at his wit's end and, curiously enough, he would still refuse to have his script and screen play pre-censored. He has a temporary expedient to circumvent the censor, that of making old successes in other languages. This has however, proved a broken reed as the present day filmgoer refuses to gobble up what attracted him 10 years ago.

As regards the imported product, the new chairman of the Central Board of Censors in Bombay, where the censoring of all imported films is done, answering a clamor for the application of the same code to all films, imported and indigenous alike, has made the categorical affirmation that this could be done only in principle and not in practice. The code, he has made clear, cannot operate unalterably with regard to the imported film, as ordinary common sense makes it necessary to consider each film in the context of the culture, the civilization and the traditions of the country making it. This clarification has been a bitter pill for the Indian "leader" to swallow, as his last hopes of getting even with the imported product which is making greater and greater inroads into his domain have been shattered.

There is, however, a move to ban all Westerns and all crime films, even though the latter place emphasis on the slogan "Crime does not pay." A bill is to be moved in Parliament. When it will be ready is not yet known, but the ban placed on the import of horror comics is a pointer.

About 350 American features were censored during the year and casualties were heavier than during 1954, both in the matter of refusal of certificates and in the matter of cuts. In some cases where certificates were first refused, these were granted later on appeal with liberal deletions. More than 30 pictures have been refused certificates, while deletions are as high as 2.1 per cent of the total footage examined.

PRODUCTION IN INDIA

Very few Indian producers have benefited out of the increased box office collections. Audience reactions to the Indian product have clearly shown the producer that he is yet to hit on the formula to please his patrons and so to deserve his patronage.

More important to him is, however, the fact that there is no chance of the Government revising its "hostile" attitude towards the industry. At the beginning of 1955, when Prime Minister Nehru presided over the first film seminar ever held in this country, he made it abundantly clear in categorical terms that it would be idle to expect any revision of entertainment tax and the censor code to the advantage of the industry.

The circumstances in which this statement was made are interesting. The first paper read at the seminar was by the president of the Film Federation of India and, under the impression that what it contained was of tremendous importance, he sent an advance copy to Mr. Nehru. At the seminar, referring to it, Mr. Nehru dismissed it as of no consequence.

Every paper read at the seminar spoke eulogistically of the Indian film and bemoaned that it was receiving Cinderella-like treatment. There was, however, one producer from Madras present and he was under no illusions. Answering the president of the Film Federation of India, he called the Indian film industry in so many terms a racket and a gamble, the last resort of the adventurer, the profiteer and the never-do-well, the inept, the incompetent, the inefficient and the ignoramus. His coup de grace was the charge that the industry, in spite of all its proud and fantastic claims, had no facts to mashal and no figures to advance in regard to even one aspect. This producer, B. N. Reddy, is yet to be answered but enough care was taken by film interests to see that it was not published in the film press.

State awards for the best films produced during the year were instituted in 1954 and went to rank outsiders as, what was considered was not box office success but story and art values and acting values. In so far as large cash prizes do not go with such awards, the Indian producer is least interested in them. The Sangeet Natak Akademie, a State-sponsored institution, has also instituted similar awards for various production values and here already, there is brisk canvassing going on to influence decisions.

There is no possibility of the State establishing a film finance corporation; nor is there any move to impound a portion of the earnings of the imported product to be diverted for the benefit of the indigenous product. During 1955, the success of a few films tempted those with a speculative turn of mind to invest in films but the history of dismal and unbroken failures, which set in the latter half of the year, indicates that even this sort of speculative capital will not be available in the coming year. There is no bank in the country which would advance a cent for picture production even though it might be prepared to invest for recovering gold from the sea. The penumbra of the eclipse to come is already in evidence with more pictures remaining incomplete, with little chances of completion, at the end of this year than ever before.

The number of pictures announced to go into production is very small, hardly 20, compared with the 50 of the years before. Bombay, which was the most prolific producer grinding out pictures with the regularity of a flour mill, has had to take a back seat for two reasons: quality Hindi films are now being made in Madras which also produces pictures for the entire South Indian market and Ceylon as well and there is only one other production center in India, Calcutta, which is interested only in the Bengali market.

There is rank disunity in the trade, while at the same time, there is rivalry between Bombay and Madras. Frantic attempts are being made to patch up differences and to evolve one representative organization which could, with justice and reason, claim to speak for the whole of the industry. That is bound to remain wishful thinking as the ego in all of the so-called leaders is very loud and, all considerations are subordinated to this dominant consideration. Not all the efforts of all the associations have been able to celebrate the Silver Jubilee of the industry in India in time, and there is no need to say more.

Another factor of importance, calculated to affect the Indian producer adversely, is the proposal to amend the copyright law so as to include films. It could easily be said that for every successful Indian picture, there are 20 imitations in the same and other languages; a tune that catches is copied a hundred times over, as music is one of the mainstays of the Indian film.

If the amendment includes the imported product as well, in so far as every Indian picture, with the exception of mythologicals, is a rehash of one or more Hollywood pictures, then the goose is as good as cooked.

Last, but not the least, the political situation may well queer the pitch for the Indian product. At present, Hindi films enjoy all-India vogue, while in the South, there is a certain amount of exchange of films in different South Indian languages. Proposals for the reallocation of States and the redrawing of frontiers have brought to the fore linguistic rivalries and parochial patriotism, while there is the suspicion all over the country that the proposal to make Uttar Pradesh the largest State with the highest representation in Parliament, is a subtle device to give weightage to the Hindi-speaking people to dominate other people speaking other languages. Bombay State will undergo fragmentation unless a miracle happens and, the future States will tend to live in water-tight compartments.

The overalil fact is also there that while India has not developed an idiom of her own, if she is unwilling to learn from Hollywood, the indigenous product remains much the same as 10 years ago, with songs and dances cluttering up the show and with a story non-existant. Educated classes, literate in English, have almost withdrawn their patronage to the Indian product and the masses are also cultivating a taste for the foreign product. It therefore does not need a prophet to say that the prospect for the Indian film is gloomy enough in 1956 and that is why frantic efforts are being made to enlarge the bailiwick of the Indian film, employing, if necessary, coercive legislation.

Strangely enough, the Government of India reportedly is lending ear to a suggestion to dragoon theaters showing the foreign product to set apart one-third the playing time for the Indian film, while legal pundits are firmly of the opinion, much as in the case of compulsory screening of documentaries and shorts made by the Films Division, this would imply violation of the freedoms of trade and expression guaranteed by the Constitution.

There are 3,000 odd theaters in India, a third of which are itinerant tent cinemas. Hardly 70 of them show the imported product regularly while about 500 of them exhibit foreign pictures during mornings on Sundays and holidays and this offers great scope for expansion. Total capacity could be computed at 600,000 per show, while the population of the country exceeds 440 million. No figures are available on admissions during the year and, if at all the Indian film industry is afraid of anything, it is afraid of statistics, right from this figure to returns furnished to income-tax authorities.

Box office prices were not raised. In Bombay State, they were drastically lowered to about 25 per cent for the lowest classes and a rate-war ensued. An uneasy compromise has been patched up for the time being.

Between 380 to 400 features were produced during 1955, of which about 250 were in Hindi, about 70 in Tamil, 30 in Bengali, 30 in Telugu and a handful in Telugu, Kannada, Malayalam and Assamese. Average production cost for an ordinary picture is about Rs. 500,000 while a super costs about 4 million rupees. Much reliance could not be placed on these figures for the simple reason these are universally bolstered up for escaping income-tax. The star actors acknowledges only a tithe of his fee and the rest passes as "black" money under the table; without exception this is the bane of the producer who has necessarily to manipulate his accounts. Ingenious devices are being resorted to while one producer was naive enough to write off a motor car under "production expenses"!

Only one color film in Technicolor, "Jhanak Jhanak Payal Baaje," by Rajkamal Kalamandir, Bombay, was made and released during the year and it promises to be the top grosser for the year. Another in Gevacolour, "AliBaba and Forty Thieves" in Tamil, is being made by Modern Theaters, Salem, Madras State, and is nearing completion. In this connection, it is germane to say that endeavors to establish a Technicolor laboratory in this country are yet to succeed as the Government vetoed the first proposals and there is no sign of any fresh activity. With the unprecedented success of "Jhanak, Jhanak," already creating records within seven weeks of release, there is very great interest in Technicolor.

CO-PRODUCTION

The producer in Bombay has been threatening to make pictures in association with Russia and China but nothing tangible appears to have been done beyond boasts in the film press. Responsible dailies have had nothing to say on this subject. Pictures in Sinhalese for the Ceylon market are being co-produced by one studio-owner in Madras, i.e., AVM Studios, and these are found to be very remunerative, as Ceylon is becoming militantly Ceylonese. There are chances of a co-production deal with American interests maturing, as the story involves undersea photography of a city in South India submerged about 4,000 years ago and preserved intact by the waves. This is now in the elementary stages.

About 300 Indian features and 300 American features were distributed during the year. A handful of Russian, German, Italian and French pictures, not exceeding 12 in all, have also come in but they have not had any welcome worth mentioning. Figures regarding revenue are not available.

EXHIBITION

Entertainment tax in this country is levied by different States in varying amounts, the incidence ranging from 25 per cent to 33 1/3 per cent, rates of tax increasing with rising prices of admission. These are collected by State Governments and ploughed back, as far as possible, to the areas from which they were derived, to be utilized for public amenities, such as provision of drinking water, good roads, reading rooms and the like.

This is one sound reason why the public refuses to support the move for reduction or abolition of entertainment tax and the educated, with cynical asperity, say that while the money that goes to the industry is so much waste, that portion of it which is salvaged as entertainment tax justifies the waste. There have been proposals to make it a central levy but no progress has been made. Giving effect to the recommendations of the States Reorganization Commission is bound to create complications as in the new States, there will be various theaters now paying the tax at different rates.

FOREIGN PRODUCT

About 300 features were imported from America and revenues are stated to be between 25 to 40 per cent higher than in 1954. Remitttances permitted will become available only in April, 1956 when the budget is ready. India does not freeze any part of the income of foreign films in spite of repeated efforts by Indian interests to have it done.

Excepting American shorts, no other commercial shorts are shown in this country and India does not make any. The only other shorts exhibited are those made by the Films Division of the Government of India. American shorts are shown only at theaters exhibiting Hollywood films and on a rough reckoning as many American shorts are shown as Indian.

To sum up, unless the Indian producer stops emulating the Bourbons, and takes heed of the writing on the wall, he is bound to perish "unwept, unhonored and unsung." The doctrine of survival of the fittest is in active operation and when the adventurer goes to the wall, in the course of about nine to 10 years, a handful of producers, not exceeding 25 at the most, will survive and then, and then alone could India claim to make Indian pictures for the Indian people.

The vendetta against the Hollywood product in which the Indian producer is indulging smacks of the fool who would lose one of his eyes if his adversary would, by implication, lose two. Government has made it clear that it would not interfere with the import of Hollywood films and said crypically, in Parliament, answering such a question, that so long as there is demand, there will be import.

Flirting with Russia and her satellites is ceasing to have attractions. The idea perhaps was to bludgeon the United States into accepting the Indian product by instituting comparison with the "magnificent reception" accorded in the USSR and her satellites. Beyond fullsome praise, the Indian producer has not benefited materially from his dealings with these countries as the whole thing is now watering down to "exchange," each to keep what he makes with the other's product.

There will be no increase in cinemas for six more years to come. The only way in which the industry could hope to thrive would be by modernizing the existing cinemas, of which about 2,900 are unfit even to be used as warehouses. It is not the patron's comfort the exhibitor studies; he is interested only in his money and that he will continue to be as long as the producer and the distributor are astride his back like two Old Men of the Sea.

MEXICO STILL MUDDLED

By EMIL ZUBRYN

FILM DAILY Staff Correspondent

MEXICO CITY

IN THE AWESOME maze of contradictory opinions and statistics covering the 1955 Mexican film scene, it is irrefutably clear that the industry continues to be as muddled as it ever was. Faced with the prospect of dwindling domestic and international box office returns, producers are beset with higher costs for color and wide screen processes and a much tougher credit policy on the part of the National Film Bank.

While so-called official production figures for the year have ranged between 95 to 105 films, from various sources, the actual total has been 85, according to Hector Fernandez, director of the Mexican Association of Film Producers. These included four films which began to roll during the last days of December.

ZUBRYN

In addition to national product, Hollywood added 11 films for a grand score of 96 movies produced in Mexico during the year.

The year did mark a forward stride, although a halting one, in the adoption of modern color and wide-screen processes, with exhibitors in major towns of the republic at least changing over to new systems. CinemaScope far outstrips all others in the field.

While in 1954 there were many two and three-week "quickies," the trend in 1955 was to four, five and six-week films, with some super-productions even taking over two months. Mexican producers turned to greater use of location shots, with all this reflecting the new financing policies established by the Government's Film Bureau which gave preference to quality scripts. Though some improvement has been made, with about a half-dozen films outstanding, the vast majority show the same mediocrity of former years.

In a bid at box office stimulus, a number of producers turned to nudity and sensational themes. Ana Luisa Peluffo won notoriety by appearing in a number of nude sequences in "The Force of Desire." Censured by the Church and the Mexican Legion of Decency, she defended herself by stating that the role (an artist's model) called for her to disrobe, and disrobe she did. Mexican female stars indicated that approximately 25 per cent were willing to shed their clothing if the story required it. However, this trend may be blocked by the National Film Bank which has warned it will not grant credits to films featuring nude females, prostitution or morbid themes.

In a very optimistic, if biased, resume of Mexico's motion picture industry, Nacional Financiera (semi-official credit institution) found it in "a very sound condition." Basing its report on Department of Interior, Bank of Mexico and other official sources, the survey, released in December, covered only the first six months of the year.

Mexican film production costs rose to "an unprecedented figure" of an average of 900,000 pesos ($72,000) in the first six months, according to National Financiera. This compares with the 750,000 pesos ($60,000) average given out by the agency for 1954. Probabilities are that production averages will approximate the stated figure since toward the close of the year there was one superproduction costing 1,900,000 pesos ($152,000) and several others also topped the million peso mark.

The industry employs 23,310 workers, with these broken up as follows: exhibition, 14,610; production, 7,500 and distribution, 1,200. Salaries are up roughly around 10 per cent and will total around 112 million pesos ($89,600,000) for the year.

Box office receipts for the year have not been released but at the half-year mark stood at 62,400,000 pesos ($4,992,000) for the Federal District (Mexico City and suburban environs) and 65 million pesos ($5,200,000) for the rest of the republic. Unofficial estimates for the year place the yearly income at roughly upward of 260 million pesos ($20,800,000). In the Federal District foreign films account for 64.3 per cent of box office and national product 35.7 per cent. Outside the city, national product rises to approximately 51 per cent. Hollywood receives the major share of this income for all other foreign product combined accounts for about 90 of the estimated 385 to 400 films exhibited during the year. The U. S. total is estimated at more than 230 films.

The Mexican movie market is served by 2,453 houses now, according to Nacional Financiera, with a total seating capacity of 1,600,000 in round figures. These serve an estimated eight million moviegoers distributed in 1,100 centers of population, with box office prices ranging from one peso (eight cents) to a top of four pesos (32 cents). The latter figure is often exceeded for first-runs of Hollywood spectacles outside of Mexico City itself where the Bureau of Public Entertainment still freezes box office price at four pesos. (Incidentally, it should be noted that the Nacional Financiera claim of 2,453 movie houses is apparently exaggerated since unofficial sources give figures ranging from 1,600 to about 1,900 theaters. Probabilities are that the lowest figure is more nearly correct). Houses are controlled by somewhat over 500 exhibitors including chain operators, for the independents have been hard hit by rising costs and squeeze out tactics of chain theater organizations.

No one still sees eye to eye in Mexico about the "right" production figure for the industry. Probabilities are that the trend to color and CinemaScope, with soaring costs, will curtail production in 1956. The major progressive producers, including Mier and Brooks, Rodriguez Brothers, Chapultepec Productions, etc., have indicated that they will use color in at least 70 per cent of their films in the New Year. Even second-string producers plan at least 20 per cent color production. As far as wide-screen production is concerned no consistent statement could be obtained, but in view of the even heavier costs, production with wide-film cameras will still be limited to financially sound producers.

Filming in color means an extra $20,000

cost for the average film, although this may be pared somewhat when more Mexican laboratory facilities are available. Oscar Brooks (of Mier and Brooks) recently warned local producers that use of color will not assure financial success of a film. He urged care in selection of themes to "justify the expense of color" and pointed to his firm's "Cape Horn" which has not recovered investment although it has been a box office hit. Brooks forecast ruin for producers who leap blithely into color without selecting stories that can be sold throughout the world.

Manuel Barbachano, a firm rooter for color, stated that Mexico has a major field in producing color shorts. He believed that by mid-1956 production could begin at an annual rate of 100, with black-and-white shorts abandoned altogether.

In standard features, level headed film executives such as Juan Banderra, head of Peliculas Mexicans (which sells to Central and South America and cooperates with Cimex, official distribution agency), talk of 90 films as a minimum figure. Other officials have urged 70 to 80 films as absolute tops. There also is a lunatic fringe which insists Mexico should produce 150 films annually.

But the trend to quality instead of quantity is being forced on Mexican producers, at least those who want to remain in business. Blas Lopez Fandoz, president of Peliculas Nacionales, warned the industry that "it is necessary to undertake a complete revaluation of Mexican film elements and to orient each production to the ever-changing needs of each market."

The first Mexican CinemaScope and color production in 1955 was "Springtime in the Heart," directed by Roberto Rodriguez and starring Andy Russell and Irasema Dillian. The added costs, estimated at 720,000 pesos ($57,600) per film make total changeover to wide-screen processes impossible and probably only 20 per cent of 1956 production will utilize CinemaScope or other processes. Still, wide screen has done away with low-budget films for producers using this medium and color require over a million pesos for standard productions and double this figure or more for super-spectacles. Mexican producers do take pride in the fact that they accomplish epics for millions of pesos as compared with millions of dollars spent by Hollywood.

Aside from new systems, Eduardo Garduño, head of the National Film Bank, in a drive for prestige, asked producers to seek out new faces, new directors, writers, cameramen and technicians. Garduño said instillation of new blood is essential because "you cannot continue serving the same dish for the palate becomes sated."

The head of the National Film Bank also issued a statement stating the institution was prepared to finance all production during 1956. The Film Bank's investment will be at least 100 million pesos ($8,000,000), Garduño said, revealing that it had financed 67 films in 1955, providing 60 to 70 per cent of production costs. However, the bank cagily limits credits to financially solvent producers who can put up at least one-third of production expenses and give real estate, bonds, or other securities as collateral. Garduño has answer critics who charge "favoritism" of established producers and "discrimination" against financially weak independent producers by saying that Mexico is not interested in subsidizing the film industry. This would be harmful to the quality goals which are expected to open international markets for national films, he said.

During the year there was considerable alarm over loss of ground in Central and South American markets. Garduño also shrugged this off by saying that the old order, where so-called independent distributors did what they wished with Mexican product, is over. Now fully 90 per cent of national production is channeled to Latin American and Spanish-speaking areas by Peliculas Mexicanas. Mexico has improved its receipts from all Spanish language areas, Garduño said, with the exception of Puerto Rico. But here, he insisted, it was not the fault of Mexico's distribution set up but the unsettled industry situation on the island.

The Mexican distribution system has now completely changed. All distributors of Mexican films to Central and South America are not independent firms but owned by producers and the National Film Bank. Cimex is the agency for the rest of the world, although Clasa-Mohme still has an interest in U. S. distribution.

However, even Garduño had to admit that European producers have made "great advances" in Central and Latin America. Further, legislative measures such as the recent Colombian restriction of film imports has hurt Mexico. In this case, instead of sending Colombia 100 films the market now has been cut to 50 and may, perhaps, go lower.

The distribution chain organized by Peliculas Mexicanas in Central and South America has cost 28 million pesos ($2,240,000) and has unified distribution. Cimex has achieved the same results in European and Asian markets. However, producers are still not satisfied although the current system now guarantees them a fair deal in receipts from foreign exhibition. The trouble chiefly stems from the fact that foreign governments impose restrictions that make it impossible for Mexican films to make any headway. There have been specific complaints against Italy and France for lack of reciprocity and unusually high import duties.

Whereas Italy sent 119 films into Mexico from 1952 to date, the republic has only been able to exhibit 19 films there. France exported 123 films to Mexico in the same period while Mexico's tally has totaled but 25. Too, a Mexican film exhibited in Italy has to pay $9,709 while Mexico only charges $2,609 for the first copy. In France a Mexican film has to pay $12,709. Producers also complain about the fact that Italy and France require dubbing of all Mexican films in the respective countries and production of copies in French and Italian laboratories. France's regulation only permit dubbing of eight Mexican films a year. The rest, with subtitles, can only be shown in 30 houses having a maximum seating capacity of 300 each.

More and more the feeling of the industry here is that Federal officials are too lenient with foreign imports. Some outspoken executives have used the term of "treason" against government officials who are "destroying the internal market" to woo "cultural nations." Foreign censorship cannot stomach the sadistic scenes in some Mexican films, according to producers, yet Mexico's houses exhibit French, Italian and other product where mothers indulge in incestuous love and such themes as nudity, brutality, murder, etc., are graphically portrayed.

Jorge Ferretis, of the Film Bureau, is working for reciprocal accords with foreign governments which do not discriminate against Mexican product. He has quite a job to do, as he has himself admitted. He mildly pointed out that Film Bureau censorship of too realistic scenes in Mexican films is justified and that the Government has only applied censorship measures which have been imposed on imported product. "All of a sudden," he said, "producers are howling about government 'interference with the freedom of expression'."

Actually Mexico's censorship is benign as a visit to houses specializing in foreign run pictures immediately shows. French undraped girlie movies and sensational sex films are still being shown. About the only thing Mexico does object to is placing it or its national heroes in a questionable or unfavorable light.

In a move to boost sagging Central and South American box office, Mexican producers are planning a series of pictures in various south-of-the-border lands, utilizing local actors as well as Mexican players. Mexico claims to be the leading producer of Spanish speaking motion pictures and the trend to Latin American locations is expected to expand the market and obtain better governmental cooperation in respective countries.

Fernando de Fuentes, a producer, estimated that at least 30 million pesos ($2,400,000) will be invested in "the most ambitious project ever attempted by Mexican companies." He estimated that each major company may make a minimum of two pictures abroad in 1956, with many of these in color.

Another box office stimulator to be tried in 1956, as revealed by Alfonso Pulido Islas, head of Cimex, will be personal appearance jaunts in the U. S. and other foreign markets by top stellar attractions of Mexican movies Islas insisted that national stars will benefit by reaping a good deal of personal publicity while the industry itself will obtain "major economic benefits" through higher box office receipts.

Best box office film of the year in the republic was "School of Vagabonds" which, in nine weeks of continuous showing at the Mexico Theater in Mexico City hit a new peak figure of 2,054,472 pesos ($164,367) Pedro Infante starred in this one. However, Cantinflas (Mario Moreno) continues as top box office draw here, with Pedro Infante second, Libertad Lamarque third and Marlon Brando in fourth place. Fifth to tenth places in official industry listings included: Arturo de Cordova, Marilyn Monroe, Gina Lollobrigida, Audrey Hepburn, Burt Lancaster and Silvana Pampanini.

There is no accord on best box office picture hits. But the Mexican Producers Association listed its selection as follows: "School of Vagabonds" (Mexican); "Waterfront," "The Living Desert," "The Last Time I Saw Paris," "The Force of Desire" (Mex.), and "Atila" for the first half of the year. In the second six months: "Ring Down the Curtain" (Mex. starring Cantinflas), Disney's "20,000 Leagues Under the Sea," Bad Seed," "Seven Brides for Seven Brothers" and "School of Music" (Mexican).

The lists did not include such Hollywood super-spectacles as "The Greatest Show on Earth" which tallied 1,308,467 pesos ($104,677) in 13 weeks; "The Robe," 1,281,952 pesos ($102,556) in 10 weeks; and "Quo Vadis," 918,980 pesos ($73,518) in seven weeks. It should be noted that "Quo Vadis" received special permission to charge a 10 pesos (80 cents) box office admission during its first-run of seven weeks; the others were exhibited at the four pesos (32 cents) top.

Toward the close of the year there were rumors that prices of movie admissions would go up 50 per cent to six pesos (48 cents). Exhibitors of first-run houses planned to show vaudeville acts between shows to win the increase. However, Mayor Ernesto Uruchurtu, immediately denied the rumors and said citizens of the city would continue to pay the four pesos (32 cents) top as long as he was head of the Federal District Government. Hope rose again when for a time it looked as though illness would force Uruchurtu's resignation. At this writing he is back on the job and box office prices in Mexico remain the same.

On the domestic exhibition front, the major news of the year was the deal signed by Peliculas Nacionales (domestic distributor) and Gabriel Alarcon of the Cadena de Oro (Gold Chain) Theater Circuit. The contract, in force for three years from March 1, 1956 effective date, gives total exhibition time to Mexican product in the Alameda first-run theater, 11 second-run houses in Mexico City, and chain owned theaters in the republic. Actual figures of the Alarcon, as well as other major chains are closely guarded secrets, but it totals over 50 houses.

Peliculas Nacionales has as members 90 per cent of all Mexican producers with these controlling approximately 80 per cent of all national production. With the organization now having more than 25 per cent of the city's 137 theaters sewn up for Mexican product alone, the problem of adequate exhibition time in the city appears to be solved. Negotiations are still going on for still further houses. So far the Alameda is the only first-run house affected although Alarcon's Olympia has also assigned 10 dates in 1956 for Mexican product.

Hollywood product still controls major exhibition time at first-run theaters but may feel the effects of the Alarcon-Peliculas Nacionales deal next year in neighborhood houses for popular priced runs. Executives of leading U. S. product distributors are not worried about the hinterlands for they have maintained a 50 per cent or slightly better hold oustide of the capital for years. However, a further inroad on neighborhood houses (and it should be noted that many of these are deluxe theaters seating from 1,500 to 3,000 persons) can have adverse financial repercussions, especially if Peliculas Nacionales is successful in raiding a few of the first-run houses.

Gen. Abelard L. Rodriguez, one of the outstanding film tycoons in the Republic, is investing 50 million pesos ($4,000,000) in construction of 15 theaters. He may also more actively enter the production field, through Diana Films and Productions Tepeyac which he wholly owns.

Hollywood continues to play a major role in the national film industry. Aside from American personalities a lot of Mexican stellar and featured players have worked as a result of the activity during 1955, including thousands of extras.

Many famous names have come down below the Rio Grande during the year to appear in one or another of 11 productions completed. Among others there was Clark Gable, Robert Mitchum, Dana Andrews, Mario Lanza, Jane Russell, Robert Ryan, Michael Rennie, Shelley Winters, Rory Calhoun, Gilbert Roland, Ursula Thies, Richard Widmark, Jane Greer, Guy Madison, Dane Clark and James Craig.

According to production plans being readied for the New Year, Hollywood may make a total of 30 films in the Republic. Perhaps as high as a third of these will be co-productions with such producers as Gregorio Wallerstein, Mier and Brooks, Filmex, Olallo Rubio, Antonio Orellana and others.

Even if actual Mexican production should slip, the prospects are that "gringo" Hollywood gold will keep Mexican studios busy in 1956. Apart from film activity, indications are that there will be a corresponding spurt in production of television shorts by U. S. units. All major Hollywood products to be made in Mexico will be in CinemaScope and color.

CUBA IN 1955

By MARY LOUISE BLANCO

Staff Correspondent, THE FILM DAILY

HAVANA

WHILE Cuba has a relatively small area—44,164 square miles, and a population of only six million people, because it is the largest natural sugar producer in the world, has been called the "World's Sugar Bowl." It is also well known for the unrivaled quality of its cigars, and the Rumba!

BLANCO

But, what most foreigners do not know, is that Cuba is excellently suited for the establishment of many industrial business enterprises, not only because of its strategic location, but due to its progressive population, which is easily adapted to all new ideas.

This small island has a tremendous purchasing power, as evidenced by the fact that the national income for the last 10 years (excepting 1952-1954 when the Army was in power), averaged $1 billion annually. In addition to its two basic industries, sugar and tobacco, Cuba has many other industrial developments in which large investments have been made.

While Cuba presently is passing through a difficult economic period, Cubans are spending $25 million annually on trips to the U. S. and purchases in that country. Notwithstanding the lessening of sugar, tobacco and mineral exports, and the existing political uncertainty, Cuba enjoys a solid monetary system and U. S. trade relations governed by reciprocal agreement.

Cuba is still an important market for U. S. films, with no quota or other barriers in effect to reduce or prevent the distribution of films. Also, no such measures are contemplated.

THEATERS

Nineteen fifty-five has been a terrible year for the small theaters and they report that business has dropped a 30 per cent and continues a steady trend downward. Admission prices have been reduced in the subsequent runs in the past six months. First runs have remained at $1 and 85 cents. Some theaters reduced admissions from 60 cents to about 50 cents to meet a highly competitive situation.

Theater operators who furnish best theaters, pleasant surroundings, comfortable seats, projection and sound, as well as good motion pictures, need not fear the future, but business in small theaters is definitely downward.

There are 549 motion picture theaters of 35 mm. in Cuba with a seating capacity of 457,500. There are 205 16 mm. in operation, representing a total capacity of 40,000. It is estimated that more than 70 per cent of the people in Cuba attend motion picture theaters once a week. Motion picture entertainment is favored by Cubans.

Just two theaters here have single-feature programs, the rest double-feature. Those money-making CinemaScope pictures were accepted at the beginning by Cuban audiences as a new, splendid process. But, now moviegoers want better product.

Box office figures are unobtainable in Cuba, it is reliably estimated that the exhibition business was 20 per cent lower in attendance last year than in 1954. There are 183 optical, 26 magnetic, and 17 perpecta installations of CinemaScope.

Cuban exhibitors complain against scarcity of good films and high rental sales practices of the distributing companies.

DISTRIBUTION

It is to be noted that while all exhibitors are complaining about their loss, 1955 was the best year for the United States distributing companies in Cuba. Increasing in earnings was attributed to CinemaScope and lack of good films from other countries.

Features released during 1955 totaled 479; 231 U. S. A. short subjects, Westerns, cartoons, documentaries are not included; 25 from England; 45 Italian and Franco-Italian; Cuban 11; Argentina 15; Spain 14; Mexican 90; French 30; 2 Sweden; 2 Japan, and 14 from Germany, Franco-Germany and other countries.

United States distributors will be unaffected by drastic import restrictions in 1956.

Some European films have done well at the box office, but United States products are at the top as they are preferred by Cubans. There can be no doubt of the fact that U. S. stars are favored by Cuban audiences. Veracruz is in the first place of the grosses.

Another success obtained by United States distributing companies was a tax from royalties that the Ministry of the Treasury has been trying to collect from the distributor since 1950. Due to the skill of the secretary-councelor of the Film Board, Dr. Ramon Garcia, the suit was won and the distributors are exempted from paying a total of $2 million.

PRODUCTION

Since 1938, two Cuban Government, Prio and Batisa, have been given subsidies, facilities and loans for the acquisition of lots and the building of studios, as well as provision for duty-free entry for all equipment and material for the development of the national industry.

In 1955 President Batista formed the Instituto Nacional para el Fomento de la Industria Cinematografica (INFICC), which is to control the Biltmore studios and equipment, and named Manolo Alonso president of the new organization.

The most significant fact emerging at the end of 1955 in the production field has been the contract between the (BANFAIC) Bank Agricultural Development of Cuba and the Dudley Pictures Corp. of California, which will make full-length feature films in Cuba. A revolving fund of $1,000,000 has been set up to get the project started. As income is received from pictures it will be put back in the fund.

Octavio Gomez Castro, Roberto Martinez Rubio, Agustin Delgado and Felix Caignet are producing about 12 features in Cuba and Mexico with Cuban and Mexican stars, per year. There is a great optimism among Cuban producers for 1956.

CENSORSHIP

Only one U. S. picture was banned, "Gangster Girls." Very few films are rejected for adults. But 70 per cent of westerns are prohibited for minors. The Board rejects murder, sex, brutal killings, robbery, scenes of passion and the use of knife.

The League of Decency has renewed its crusade against motion pictures which they classify as immoral. This League is not welcomed by public, critics and the National Collegium of Newspapermen, which declared opposition to a second censorship board, backed by clerical circles. The League tried to censor the film "Martin Luther."

Nineteen fifty-six might be the start of a film censorship tax. A new measure, has been shelved by the Minister of the Interior. But it is a law. Exhibitors must pay $1 for a short reel; 16 mm., $5 each reel, and full-length feature films, $25.

1956 MIGHT BE A BIG YEAR

It is imperative for Cuba to seek and create new sources of employment and income. There is a broad field and countless opportunities for Cubans and foreign capital investments in industries. The country is marching on, slowly, but surely overcoming difficulties of every description and stubbornly determined to achieve a level of high industrialization.

TELEVISION: HOLLYWOOD'S YEAR

By DONALD LA BADIE
Staff Writer, THE FILM DAILY

ALTHOUGH LIVE PROGRAMMING reached some "spectacular" heights during the last year, delivering in tune with NBC board chairman Pat Weaver's concept of the quality show of super-proportions, and suggesting "colossals" for the future, television in 1955 was possibly most significant in film terms, particularly in the relation of the motion picture industry and its expanding screens to the approximately 32,000,000 small screens in homes across the country.

THE PLUNGE

LA BADIE

Signs of a closer relationship between the two mediums, signs of an increasing video use of Hollywood production, acting and financing talents, were everywhere. To begin with, three major studios launched their own television programs. (Republic was already in business through its subsidiary, Hollywood Television Corp., as was Columbia, whose subsidiary, Screen Gems, last year turned out 178 films). Making their bow were M-G-M, which took on a half-hour program lumping together guest stars, film clips and behind-the-lots glimpses under the title of "M-G-M Parade"; Warners, with "Warner Brothers Presents," an hour stanza featuring alternating series based on three studio properties: "King's Row," Cheyenne" and "Casablanca"; and 20th-Fox, represented by "The TCF Hour," a dramatic anthology show which utilized new propetries as well as scripts based on old films.

Of the programs, the 20th-Fox venture fared best with the critics, but all three companies were criticized for using television for free advertising and for failing to bring to the new medium the standards they had set in theatrical movie productions. By the year-end, however, there were indications of format modification of all three shows. In terms of production, Fox was ahead with a partially completed telefilm schedule of 166 programs.

Another close-to-the-industry program initiated during the year was "Screen Director's Playhouse," produced in conjunction with the Screen Director's Guild and utilizing the talents of such top meggers as Fred Zinnemann and John Ford. Like the three studio programs, this one came in for a good deal of negative criticism as entertainment turned out in a left-handed manner and utilizing inferior scripts.

ABC FILM POLICY

With the Warners and M-G-M shows making their bows via American Broadcasting facilities, that company's close ties with the motion picture industry was sharply underlined as well as its belief in the future of film on television. During the year, ABC also programmed a new Walt Disney celluloid series, "The Mickey Mouse Club"; scheduled a package of top J. Arthur Rank pictures in a choice of Sunday night time slot under the title, "Famous Film Festival" and announced plans to play off still other British films against the traditional weekday afternoon soap opera fare. Additionally, the network made known that it would go in heavily for film series during the 1956-57 season, among them an hour and a half dramatic anthology, "Command Performance."

OLD FILMS TO TV

As important as the studio entries into television were the release of an unprecedented number of old films, including the first sale of a major studio library. Under this latter deal, Matty Fox's C & C Television Corp. acquired RKO's 740-film backlog for $15,200,000. Adding to the flood were the 104 films which Columbia decided to rent to TV through Screen Gems; UM & M's acquisition of 1,600 Paramount shorts; MCA's purchase of 123 Rogers-Autry features from Republic; David Selznick's release to NTA of 12 of his outstanding productions and the 139 J. Arthur Ranks pictures which went to ABC. In particular, the sale of the RKO library has led to a feeling in some quarters of the entertainment industry that the sale of other studio libraries is not far away, a presentiment supported by recent rumors concerning an offer of the Warners backlog to ABC. Some observers see a system evolving where theatrical films automatically will go to television a few years after their theater runs.

FIRST-RUN ON TELEVISION

A development which may have some significance for future television-movie industry relations was the premiere of the late Sir Alexander Korda's "The Constant Husband" as an NBC spectacular last Fall, prior to a possible theatrical release. Although this frothy British comedy received a mixed critical reaction, the network shortly after got the rights to an even more important British feature, "Richard III," which it will present in a three-hour television session this spring, a day before the picture's U. S. theater bow. Except in the case of British prestige pictures, the future of such video first-runs would seem unlikely. More likely would be network use of some of the outstanding items in the RKO and Columbia films now available for televising. When RKO sold Fox its backlog, it retained one-shot national presentation rights to 150 of its best oldies through Dec. 22, 1957 and Screen Gems has already talked with the networks regarding the best of the Columbia films as spectacular material.

TELEFILM PRODUCTION UP

Reflecting the studio plunge into television, there was twice as much production of telefilms in Hollywood last year as in 1954. At the end of the year, between 40 and 50 per cent of class A nighttime hours were on film, and although there was criticism that live shows which had gone over to film had lost in spontaneity, there were predictions that the ratio would increase. Despite this boom, General Teleradio executive warned a National Television Film Council luncheon this fall that the increase in the supply of telefilms had far outstripped the growth in demand, creating a problem which would have to be faced.

TV SCRIPTS INTO FILMS

So usual were Hollywood purchases of TV properties by the end of 1955 that they were noted only routinely in the news columns. However, it could not fail to be noted that one of the year's big hits and a certain Academy Award contender, "Marty," had been adapted from a drama originally presented on television.

LIVE (AND LONG) PROGRAMMING

During 1955 the so-called "spectacular" came into its own as a staple of live TV entertainment, taking a quality jump from a humble beginning in 1954's "Satins and Spurs" to last year's "Peter Pan," "Our Town," "Skin of Our Teeth," "Cyrano de Bergerac," all on NBC; and "Caine Mutiny Court Martial" and the Noel Coward-Mary Martin opus, "Together With Music" on CBS. Indicative of the potential strength of these big quality entertainments were the ratings piled up by "Peter Pan." So accepted was Pat Weaver's idea, once pooh-poohed on many sides, that by the beginning of 1956 the hour-and-a-half show had become a convention and a number of regularly-scheduled programs had made plans to switch to the 90-minute format. Accordingly, any entertainment deserving the label "spectacular" or "colossal" will have to be even bigger from here on out. Taking cognizance of the situation, NBC has in the works two and three-hour productions for the future.

Another important trend seen in the live programming area during the past year was the increasing number of network originations from Hollywood, many of them shows which originally had been produced in New York. One hundred and twenty-eight network programs originated on the West Coast during 1955 as against 93 in 1954, one of the main reasons for the increase being the superior production facilities available in Hollywood. A production center for New York City was still a future project.

A trend toward dramatic shows and away from the situation comedies which had been popular for several years was observable during 1955, and the jackpot show returned to the rating lists with a bang in the form of "$64,000 Question."

COLOR TV

Despite the fact that RCA board chairman David Sarnoff declared at year end that color television "got off the ground" in 1955, his son, new NBC president Robert Sarnoff estimated at the same time that there were no more than "25,000 to 50,000" color sets in use in the country. To support their belief in the future of color, the RCA-NBC combo last year increased their color programming schedule, announced the building of new color studios and the purchase of equipment at a cost of $12,000,000, revealed that NBC's Chicago outlet, WNBQ, would become the world's first all-color TV station in 1956 and set up extensive outdoor color tests for the new year. CBS color programming continued light and ABC had no color at all. Throughout the television receiver manufacturing industry, there were predictions that two or three years would pass by before color TV sets would be priced at mass market figures.

SUBSCRIPTION AND THEATER TV

During 1955 there were more than enough arguments on both sides of the fence over the toll TV question, but at the end of the year it was still in the hands of the Federal Communications Commission, with chances less than likely that it would be taken under consideration before the presidential election. More than a few observers felt that the chances of the coin-box medium had been hurt by the increase in quality entertainment on free television and the first sale of a major studio library, promising an imminent availability of fresh feature material.

NBC's successful presentation of the "Sadlers Wells Ballet" as one of its spectaculars plus that network's excellent work in the field of television opera appeared to weaken the argument of toll TV proponents that the present video audience is culture-starved.

As far as feature films go, the situation has changed drastically from the time a few years ago when viewer selection was limited to dated Westerns and English B-grades. The sale of the RKO library makes available a good number of first-rate features which have probably stood the test of time and are unfamiliar to a new generation. The release of still other major libraries is probably not far off, providing even less reason for the average set owner to dig for the coins. That, of course, leaves open the sports field.

Sports was the only entertainment area in which theater television showed any life this year. The Marciano-Moore fight and its rematch scored record gates, but otherwise the use of closed circuit TV was confined to a multipled use in industry.

FOREIGN TELEVISION

The biggest news of the television year abroad was the bow of British commercial television on Sept. 21, providing the English populace with its first taste of video American-style, and setting up a strong market for U. S. telefilms. At year end, only about 500,000 sets out of an estimated 1,500,000 had been converted for the new service and the only commercial station in operation was in London. Though commercial TV had not yet begun to realize a profit, the new programs, particularly those of U. S. origin, were reported popular with owners of two-channel sets.

Elsewhere in Europe, according to a statement made by Ernest A. Marx, director of Du Mont's international division, in November, improved economic conditions were leading to a minor video boom. Marx saw particular promise in the growth of the industries in Germany and Italy.

YEAR BOOK

PERSONNEL

Below is listed the personnel of motion picture companies in the production, distribution and allied fields, as well as television film producers-distributors, equipment companies, associations, exhibitor organizations, and labor organizations.

In previous editions of THE FILM DAILY YEAR BOOK, much of this material was listed separately. The object of the change is to place the industry's top organizations in all fields in one alphabetical section, thus facilitating reference.
